

GERMAN FORCES DRIVE NORTHWARD IN NORWAY

Chase Says Reds Intended to Start Civil War in U. S.

Former Organizer Reports Communists Planned to Maneuver General Strike in Nation

Outlines Steps

Theory Held Revolution Would Follow From Civil War

Washington, April 25 (AP)—Ezra Chase, who said he had been an organizer for the Communist party at Los Angeles, told the Dies committee today that the party intended to plunge the country into civil war by calling a general strike in basic industries.

The witness identified what he said were minutes of the Los Angeles county Communist party convention in March, 1937.

These, he said, showed that the convention had adopted resolutions directing that Communists organized a "progressive caucus" in the Los Angeles Central Labor Council and its Communist units be formed especially in CIO organizations.

The main idea of the party, Chase testified, was to rally the entire population of Los Angeles behind the trade union movement, and particularly behind CIO organization efforts in basic industries like automobiles, steel, aircraft construction, rubber and communications.

Tells of Purpose
Asked the purpose of this policy, he said:

"The Communist party is an organization having a revolutionary intent."

"Its purpose is to take over this form of government and install one of its own. Its interest in basic industries is that through union organizations it can control them and be in a position to call a general strike."

"By a general strike the party can paralyze industry, creating a situation leading to civil war. From a civil war, it is easy to convert that into a revolutionary war to accomplish the party's purposes."

Chase testified that he was a native of Idaho Falls, Idaho, and that he had joined the communist party about 1931.

Under Party Orders

Chase, telling of what he called communist "concentrations" in aircraft plants and other key industries, declared the communist workers were under party orders to supply the Soviet union with any information the latter desired.

"The immediate purpose of the communist party in the United States," said Chairman Dies (D., Tex.), "is to secure valuable military and industrial secrets for transmission to Moscow. Isn't that true?"

"Yes, sir," Chase replied emphatically. He expressed agreement also with another Dies statement that through the American communist party the union has "an espionage system they don't have to pay for."

The witness declared that in the party's drive on "basic" industries groups of "Red builders" were sent into the Douglas and Lockheed aircraft plants on the Pacific coast. He described the "builders" as trusted party workers engaged in recruiting and in circulating literature.

Approves Legislation

Washington, April 25 (AP)—The House naval committee approved today legislation authorizing modernization of the battleships New York, Texas and Arkansas by increasing the range of the big guns by 10,000 yards. The cost would be $5,725,000.

A.F.L. Union Strike Puts End to Shipments to New York's Fair

New York, April 25 (AP)—A strike by American Federation of Labor teamsters halted all deliveries to the World's Fair today with the exposition's opening only 16 days away.

Moreover, the Building and Construction Trades Council (AFL) announced that all work on the fair grounds would be stopped unless the dispute between the fair and Local 282 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters was settled on the union's terms.

Crux of the dispute was a three-year-old closed shop agreement between the Construction Council and the Fair Corporation which outlawed the use of the city trucks for garbage disposal at the fair unless the trucks were manned by AFL drivers.

Doubly happy were Mr. and Mrs. Jay Cooke (above) of Philadelphia because on the day of their 16th wedding anniversary Cooke scored a victory in the Republican primaries for U. Rotary Club Holds Past Presidents' 3 Farm Measures Day at Luncheon To Conserve Soil

Charter Members Also Are Honored; Local Club Is in Third Place for March Roll

Charter members and past presidents of Kingston Rotary were honored at the regular meeting of the club, held at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Wednesday.

At the business meeting preceding the program Samuel J. Scudder, Jr., announced that the Kingston Library needed technical books and that donations of such books would be appreciated. Aside from donations the library would be pleased to have recommendations as to outstanding books in technical lines.

President Van Ingen told the members that the local club stood third out of 21 clubs for attendance record in March. Guests present Wednesday included Rotarians Robert Ellsworth and Arthur Nelson of the Albany Club, George C. Smith of Fleischmanns and John A. Wright of Scotia. Other guests were Harry Crookes of Saugerties, Henry C. Bright and Paul Samuelson of Kingston.

Arthur H. Colligan, past president, had charge of the program. He noted that the club had had 24 presidents, including the present presiding officer, B. C. Van Ingen. Of the 23 past presidents 14 are living, of which number all but two were present for the occasion, the absentees being Dr. F. E. Seely and Everett Fessenden. There are four living charter members. Two of them, David Burgevin and Arthur G. Carr, were present and the two others, Dr. Seely and Addison Pardee, were unable to attend.

The rest of the program was under direction of Past President Emil Boessneck, who first presented Arthur G. Carr, who read a paper prepared by Addison Pardee on the organization of Rotary here.

Mr. Boessneck then read a list of the past presidents, with a list of members who joined Rotary under each one of them, while past presidents at the meeting answered for themselves. Those present and answering were Al Harder, Ed Hathaway, Emil Boessneck, Sam Scudder, Art Nelson, Joe Morgan, Al Schmid, Walt Elston, Charles Carter, Art Colligan, James Loughran and Gene Pemberton.

Following is the story of the events which led up to the organization of Kingston Rotary, details of its organization and some of the difficulties experienced during its first year. The paper was prepared by Addison D. Pardee, a charter member and first secretary of the club and was read by Arthur G. Carr, who also is a charter member.

Organization of Rotary

Inspiration had much to do with the organizing of our club. In September, 1914, I was privileged to attend the convention of the National Association of Casualty and Surety Agents, held that year at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, West Va. At this convention were prominent insurance men from all parts of the United States, and many of them were members of Rotary Clubs in their home cities. They talked

Five Are Injured

Priceless Glass Lost

Dublin, April 25 (AP)—A heavy blast attributed by police to a time bomb planted by the outlawed Irish Republican Army in the Dublin castle headquarters of the Irish government's special detective branch early today injured five detectives and shattered priceless stained glass windows of the Castle Royal.

Eye witnesses said the scene resembled the havoc resulting from an air raid.

Shortly after the blast troops mounted guard at the approaches to the castle and soldiers on bridges and roads leading from Dublin questioned all motorists.

Several families living as caretakers in the castle had narrow escapes from harm.

Senate Committee Begins Its Probe Of 'Slush' Money

Investigators Are Working in Nebraska, Maryland, West Virginia and Other States

Washington, April 25 (AP)—The Senate campaign investigating committee began running down complaints of "slush funds" and other political misdeeds in five states today as Senator Neely (D., W. Va.) sought G-men to assist committee agents already ordered into his state.

Chairman Gillette (D., Iowa), in announcing that the committee had sent or was dispatching investigators to Nebraska, West Virginia, Missouri, Maryland and Kansas, would not disclose the source of the complaints.

But it was an open secret around the Senate that in most instances they originated with sitting senators. Neely confirmed this as far as West Virginia was concerned.

Gillette said investigators had been ordered into that state to look into complaints of "improper use of funds and official influence" in the Democratic senatorial campaign.

Would Reflect Condition

He added that if the charges were substantiated even in part, they would reflect a condition "relative to the control of the election machinery which is subversive and destructive of the opportunity of the electorate to register its opinion at the polls."

Neely told reporters later that he had requested the inquiry to "prevent the statehouse machine from debauching and corrupting the election with the use of money and whiskey and all the other things that money can buy."

He said he also had requested help from G-men and had held a "very satisfactory" conference with Attorney General Jackson.

Neely charged the statehouse group with "corrupt use of a slush fund created by a two per cent levy on state employees." He said he had been informed this group would have $500,000 in the fund by May 1.

Candidates in the race for the Democratic senatorial nomination are Senator Rush D. Holt, former Governor H. G. Kump, State Senator J. Buehl Shahal, and Harley Kilgore.

Opposed by Andrews

Neely, a candidate for governor, is opposed by Carl Andrews, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee. Gillette said investigators were going to Nebraska to look into complaints of large expenditures in the recent primaries, with "particular reference" to the presidential preference primary.

He would not name the political party involved, but said it would not be "hard to guess."

Belligerents Trade Blows in Norway

High-lighted on this map are the blows which enemy forces dealt each other in the grim fighting for Norway, and at the same time the conflict seemed likely to spread to Sweden. The British made a terrific bombing raid on Germany's island air base at Sylt (1) while Germans and Allies fought battle lines around Oslo and engaged each other in Norway (2). Speculation on the Swedish situation centered on the possibility that Germany might move troops from Sassnitz to Malmö (3). Symbols on the map mark the scenes of reported air bombing and ship sinkings.

Grand Jury Gives Indictments Today In Liquor Traffic

Federal Group Hands Up New Writs Against 122 Persons on Charges of Tax Evasion

New York, April 25 (AP)—A federal grand jury today indicted 122 individuals, 116 of whom have been rounded up by treasury agents, of charges of operating a vast, five-state illicit liquor empire and defrauding the government of $1,600,000 in taxes during the last 10 months.

Treasury department spokesmen said this is the largest federal indictment ever returned in any federal court, and the round-up one of the greatest mass arrests ever effected.

William E. Dunigan, head of the treasury's alcohol tax unit enforcement agents, said the arrests were restricted to principals in the vast ring which blanketed New Jersey, most of New York state, and covered much of Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

"If we had arrested common bootleggers, we would have had to include a thousand or more," said Dunigan. "We arrested only heads of the combine, wholesalers and distributors."

Dunigan said the ring was "inherited" a year ago by Mauro Manna (of 371 Second Street), Jersey City, N. J., who Angelo La Padure and Frank Romano, the previous operators, were jailed with 103 others in connection with the ring's operations.

Manna, Dunigan said, has a record of 12 arrests, several on charges of murder or assault with intent to kill.

Dunigan said treasury agents headed by Joseph S. Horowitz and William L. Thibadeau, have in (Continued on Page 23)

Department of Agriculture Counsels Precautions Against Boom in Lands

Washington, April 25 (AP)—The agriculture department weighed the possibility today of a recurrence of the land speculation boom touched off by the World War in 1914, and counseled precautions. Noting that World War conditions had sent farmland values skyrocketing almost 100 per cent in a decade, the department sought to gauge the possible effects of the present conflict on farm prices.

Factors adverse to another land boom, it was said, tended to outweigh those which might encourage one. The department emphasized, however, that the unpredictable element of "inflation, psychology" would upset calculations.

"The possibility of even a partial repetition of world war movements in land values," a department report said, "would appear to justify giving serious consideration to the formulation of legal measures aimed at discouraging excessive increases."

Discussion of the present war's effects on farm problems shared attention with these other agricultural developments.

A 12 per cent increase in farmers' cash income for the first quarter of 1940 over the first quarter of 1939. The agriculture department reported that the total for the first three months this year was $1,987,000,000, against $1,773,000,000 last year.

An approaching showdown over the congressional deadlock over the billion-dollar farm bill. House and Senate conferences have decided that if a speedy agreement cannot be reached, the measure will be sent back to the House floor for a battle over the $347,000,000 in extra appropriations which were tacked on in the Senate.

Allies Are Pushed Back by Nazis; Sweden Warned

German High Command Tells British That Bombing of Towns Will Be Followed by Same Tactics; Allegations Are Denied

(By The Associated Press)

The Germans pushed rapidly northward in Norway today, apparently with such pile-driver power that Allied forces were unable to stop them.

The British admitted that the Allies had been compelled to retreat from their positions near Lillehammer because of "increased enemy pressure" in that area, a pivotal point of the struggle for the "gate to Oslo."

DNE official German news agency, reported one Nazi force 30 miles beyond Lillehammer, at Ringebu, about 110 miles from the occupied Norwegian capital on a railroad through the important Gudbrandsdal valley.

It said other Nazi troops were at Tynset, 150 miles north of Oslo on another, parallel railroad along the Swedish frontier. . . . The German advance apparently was aimed at speeding reinforcements to the Trondheim front, key to domination of Norway.

The British acknowledged that Nazi forces appeared "to be digging in just north of Steinkjer," wrested from the allies. The British announcement said there had been no further fighting in that area.

Meanwhile, signs of possible unrestricted warfare were seen in Berlin.

Accuse British
The German high command accused Britain of opening "aerial warfare on undefended, militarily unimportant localities"—a charge quickly and officially denied in London.

This was its verdict on a reported bombardment near Heide, Schleswig-Holstein. Authoritative reports had said previously that the bombs fell into marshland, without even breaking a window.

The high command's pronouncement, seen in the light of Adolf Hitler's declaration that Germany would answer blow for blow, was regarded in some Berlin quarters as a hint that Nazi warplanes soon might try to bomb open British and French towns.

Foreboding for Sweden was seen also in the statement of one authorized German source that her hour for "decision" was approaching. But, this informant declared, "we have no designs whatever on Sweden."

Swedish-German trade negotiations now in progress apparently were at the core of this, the German source declaring that "it is conceivable that England may demand that Sweden discontinue supplying Germany with certain things."

Successes Reported
The high command reported these German successes:

At sea—Two enemy destroyers destroyed; a French destroyer flintilla put to flight; a British cruiser hit and set afire; two new-type Norwegian destroyers put into German service.

On land—The German position north of Trondheim strengthened; advances in the areas north and northwest of Oslo.

In the air—Four British and two French warplanes shot down; against only three German losses.

In the far north, DNE said British warships again had pounded Narvik with "very active" shelling while Germans and a strong allied force ashore were locked in a still-continuing battle 18 miles northeast of the Norwegian iron ore port.

In London, meanwhile, Sir John Anderson, minister of home security, told the House of Commons he was considering strict repression of subversive elements. (Continued on Page 23)

Two Norwegians Tell How They Stole to Britain With Nazi Plane

London, April 25 (AP)—It was a German Heinkel seaplane but the swastikas had been painted out and covered with the Norwegian insignia—so it flew unscathed over British defenses into a British port.

Out stepped two Norwegian airmen, bringing a story of how they stole the machine from two German airmen who talked too loudly over their beer about the whereabouts of the plane.

The Norwegians said they overheard the Germans talking in a Norwegian tavern, slipped out quietly, found the ship, hastily painted over the German insignia and took off for England.

Women of Classis Hold Luncheon at Reformed Church

MISS SUE WEDDELL

"Speed the Message" was the theme of the third annual spring luncheon of the Women's Missionary Union of the Classis of Ulster held Wednesday at the First Reformed Church.

It was the largest meeting since the inauguration of the luncheons three years ago with 155 women making reservations from all parts of the county. Toy airplanes suspended from the ceiling and placed in the center of the tables symbolized the theme.

Miss Sue Weddell, general secretary of the Women's Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America was the guest speaker. Miss Weddell was one of the American delegates to the World Missionary Conference at Madras and also visited Arabia and other parts of India where she made interesting contacts with the women of the countries.

Miss Weddell returned to this country feeling that the business of the church abroad is unfinished, owing partly to the fact that the work has been reduced 40 per cent. During her travels which lasted for five months, she went half way around the world, touched four continents, was in 14 different countries and visited 150 different Christian centers of the world.

Of her many impressions, Miss Weddell stressed two which seemed to her the outstanding ones of the trip. The first was the wide extent of Christian life and service around the world and the other was the revelation that the Madras conference was the product of missionary work and the fruit of all the years of missions.

In speaking of the Madras conference, Miss Weddell deviated from the usual report of the religious happenings and reactions felt by the delegates but gave as well her personal impressions and of her surroundings and contacts at the conference.

The Madras conference, she said, was the most widely representative group of Christians that ever came together in the history of the world. There were 470 delegates from 69 different countries, all appointed as official delegates by the churches in their own lands.

They were gathered to decide what the Christians should do to bring about the kingdom of God in a world full of strife and destruction.

India, said Miss Weddell, was an ideal choice for the conference with its wonderful works of God and man, a land full of color and beauty and full of the love of peace and hospitality.

In her talk, she described the rooms in the Madras Christian College assigned to the delegates where the furnishings were adequate but not luxurious, she spoke of the food given them and of the difficult task of catering to peoples from 69 nations.

One interesting fact mentioned by Miss Weddell in regard to the food was that Scandinavians, Americans and British predominated. In order to please all tastes, coffee was served at 10 o'clock every morning for the Scandinavians, tea at 4 o'clock every afternoon in deference to the British and a supper snack before retiring in respect to the Americans.

Another interesting aspect of the conference told by the delegate was her impression at the first meeting when the delegates, all wearing their own native colorful costumes and speaking a jargon of different tongues, joined together in saying in English "the Lord's prayer."

Everything the church is doing today was discussed at the conference as the minds of the world were brought together. Miss Weddell has prepared a summary in 52 selections of the things done at the conference which is titled, "The Miracle of Madras" and will be off the press shortly.

The fruit of the missionary work revealed in the living personalities at the conference, 50 per cent of whom came from places like the Congo, Java, and the Far East, convinced Miss Weddell that missions have not been a failure. She was deeply impressed by the transformation in the lives and faces of the people who had accepted Christianity as compared with those who had not yet been approached.

"I have come back newly convinced," she said, "that we Christians of the world hold in our hands today the only power for a better world. Christianity will work in the world today if we make it work."

Miss Weddell was introduced by Mrs. Stephen W. Ryder, president of the Missionary Union of the Classis of Ulster who presided at the meeting. Grace before the luncheon was asked by the Rev. Charles D. Palmer, a short devotional service was conducted by Mrs. A. Noble Graham who spoke briefly on the theme "Speed the Message." Mrs. C. F. Doty sang two selections, "Speed Away," a familiar hymn, and "God's Love" by Stephens.

Civic Forests Spread in U. S.

Community Owned Tracts Declared Profitable Investments.

WASHINGTON.—People laughed—so the records say—when the city fathers of Newington, N. H., decided in 1710 to purchase a "community forest"—110 acres from an uncharted wilderness.

That was America's first community forest. It proved so successful that since then hundreds of cities have purchased similar wooded tracts. They have been among the most profitable investments these cities have made.

The Newington forest has continuously served the community for 230 years. It has supplied the city with materials for building the village church, the parsonage, town hall, school and library. From it has come timber for the building of bridges and fuel to heat public buildings.

Total in U. S. 1,500.

Reports compiled by the United States forest service indicate that the 1,500 community forests in the nation contain more than 3,000,000 acres. More than 146,000,000 trees have been planted in these locally owned projects, the service said.

President Roosevelt is one of the most ardent advocates of community forests. In the foreword of a recent forest service publication on community forests he said he hoped their number would be increased.

"Community forests are an old and popularly accepted part of forest conservation," Mr. Roosevelt said. "They have helped for many years to reduce local taxes by yielding profitable timber crops."

"They have also provided other benefits, such as watershed protection, outdoor recreation, shelter for birds and beast, and permanent jobs through the sustained production of cordwood, posts, telephone poles, railroad ties, pulpwood, Christmas trees and logs for lumber."

Other Advantages Cited.

"More of our communities could profit economically, socially and spiritually by ownership and operation of their own forests close at home. Developments of such local forests would be an important step in the rebuilding of our national resources and would provide additional outdoor playgrounds for the children of America."

The largest community-owned forest in the United States, and probably in the world, is owned by the city of Seattle, Wash., the forest service said. It has 66,380 acres of timberland in a watershed from which the city has sold more than $1,000,000 worth of timber.

Income from the Danville forest in New Hampshire has been placed in a trust fund which now totals $9,316. The interest from the trust and the forest have returned the town approximately $4.45 per acre net per year for the last 100 years.

Ghostly Fleet Receives Another Ship in Gulf

MOBILE, ALA.—Another ghost ship has found a final resting place in this Alabama seaport after leaving the secret of its crew's fate beneath the rolling waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

The three-masted British schooner Gloria Colita left Mobile late in January with a cargo of lumber destined for South America. Her home port was listed as St. Vincent, British West Indies.

Three weeks later the trim little vessel was towed back into Mobile by the United States coast guard cutter Carligan, ripped and torn, its rigging in tatters and deck-housing battered into splinters and crewless.

Its crew of eight and skipper had mysteriously vanished. Part of a yellowed log fluttered about the deserted deck, but it shed no light on the crew's fate.

The crew of the cutter that salvaged the hulk about 200 miles out in the gulf from Mobile believes that a sudden squall came up and swept the entire crew overboard before they could get the sails down.

Evidence of this theory lies in the fact the schooner had one main-sail still partly aloft, flapping wildly in the wind, when the coast guard spotted it.

Firemen Wait Two Years, And It's All for Nothing

GRANGER, WASH.—Two years ago Granger organized "the finest volunteer fire department in central Washington" and named Darwin Davis as assistant chief.

But now they're considering all sorts of dire action against Davis, because he spoiled the chance the department had awaited for two years.

For 24 months members of the department drilled faithfully, waiting for the day they could show their prowess in a real fire.

It finally came, and when the fire alarm rang the members turned out in force—all except Davis. Not waiting for their assistant chief, the volunteer firemen dashed to the scene.

They found Davis coming out of the house, their destination. He had arrived ahead of the department and put the fire out.

P.T.A. Project at School No. 8

In the fall a vacant room in School No. 8 was the inspiration for a project for the Parent-Teacher Association. Through the cooperation of the Board of Education and the N. Y. A., the room has been made into a school library where pupils may draw and return books for their leisure reading. The parents and the pupils have all worked hard to make the result which is shown in the above picture. Some of the books were given by the parents, more are still needed. Pupils of the 6B and 4B and 4A grades also had a great part in the building of the library in that they won money by selling seeds and gave the award to the library fund. In the picture are Jean Laidlaw, Beth Winters and Margaret Bierwisch, seated at the table. Superintendent Arthur Laidlaw and Principal Raymond H. Rignall are standing at the rear.

Firemen Discuss Pension Action

The members of the Kingston paid fire department plan to meet at 4 o'clock this afternoon to decide whether they will unite with the police department in seeking signers to a petition calling for a special election on the local police and fire pension bills, recently adopted by the common council.

The meeting was planned for Wednesday, but was adjourned until this afternoon.

The members of the police department are now getting ready to circulate petitions among the voters of the city. In order to call a special election on the pension bills it will be necessary for the police to obtain 1,500 signers to the petition.

It was said last night that efforts were being made to induce the police to unite with the state pension system, and drop the step taken to hold a special election. In order for the police to become members of the state retirement fund it requires a 60 per cent favorable vote of the members of the police force.

Several weeks ago, before the pension bills were adopted, efforts to have the police and firemen join the state system, were rejected by both departments.

Unique Evidence Supports Basic Intelligence Theory

By RENNIE TAYLOR (Associated Press Science Writer)

Berkeley, Calif., April 25—Unique evidence supporting the theory that a person at birth has all the basic intelligence he ever will have and that it may be influenced but not increased or decreased by training or environment, was reported today at the University of California.

The findings also indicated that intelligence is not a single thing but is composed of several factors which develop irregularly. Environment and education may cause these separate functions to develop differently.

Thus everyday experiences may govern to some extent the way in which a person progresses mentally but they cannot make him either more or less intelligent.

The report was made by Dr. Nancy Bayley, psychologist of the university's Institute of Child Welfare. Its basis is unique because the study has followed the mental development of the children involved from birth to nine years of age. The complete mental records of more than 40 children were used.

Dr. Bayley and her associates found that very young children, even though they might have similar intellectual powers, did not develop mentally at uniform rates of speed.

Several of the children experienced wide changes in environment during the many years of observation. Some of these changes ostensibly were detrimental, others beneficial. But the scores of their intelligence tests did not change accordingly.

Wawarsing Debt Legalized by Bill

Albany, April 25 (Special)—The acts of the Town of Wawarsing relative to certificates issued to pay obligations and deficiencies in 1939 were legalized Wednesday by Governor Lehman with the signing of a bill sponsored by Senator Arthur H. Wicks of Kingston.

The measure, introduced in the senate only a week before adjournment day, now becomes Chapter 724 of the Laws of 1940.

On Tuesday, the governor signed Senator Wicks' bill which the state will get after five, instead of 10, years unclaimed consumers' deposits placed with gas and electric utilities. This measure, one of the Republican majority's revenue bills, make a concession to the utilities in that it reduces from six to five per cent the rate of interest borne by the deposits.

Roy Bruner, right-hander from Baltimore who showed a lot of stuff with the Phillies at Miami Beach and in northbound exhibition games, reeled off four International League shutouts last year. Three of them were in consecutive starts, with Rochester, Buffalo and Toronto the victims.

POLITICS

Although winter is just releasing its delayed and icy grip on a goodly part of the country, politics is again going full blast and in only a few weeks more the first of the great national conventions will be held—that of the Republicans in Philadelphia late in June.

Because of the fact that the Republicans are the minority party and President Roosevelt has already served two terms the race for the presidential nominations at the two conventions is still a wide open affair.

The principal question in the Democratic camp is whether or not President Roosevelt will stand for a third term. There is little question that his ardent New Deal admirers want him to do so. They feel he has the best chance to win again and is best qualified to carry on the New Deal program and carrying on this program means their continuance in office and the perpetuation of their jobs. There is little question that President Roosevelt can win the nomination if he again desires. There is not much doubt that he could nominate whom he chooses. The question is whether, if he elects not to run, he will seek to put over some prime New Deal court favorite like Attorney General Robert Jackson, or whether the convention may become a more or less wide open affair subject of course to the President's final approval of its actions.

Among the other candidates mentioned, of course, are Vice President Garner, the anti-New Deal candidate, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Paul McNutt has just started a nation-wide tour in search of delegates.

On the Republican side, District Attorney Tom Dewey, of New York, seemed to get an edge because of his winning in the primaries of Wisconsin and Nebraska. By the same token Senator Vandenberg, his opponent in these two states, seemed to get a set-back. But the race is by no means over. Much of Dewey's strength has been based on his supposed ability to carry New York and trouble has already broken out among the Republicans in this state. Furthermore, while entering no primaries except that of his own state, Senator Taft has been going quietly ahead here and there, gathering delegates, and will go to Philadelphia with a sizeable block of them. This block might easily become the foundation of an anti-Dewey barrier. And there are some presentable dark horses whose faces can be dimly discerned through the mists of the future.

It is too early of course to discuss the November result. Too many things can happen in the meantime. The Republicans are distinctly encouraged by their showing to date, but there is much distance yet to be traveled and they will make a mistake if they permit themselves to become too confident.

TRADE IN THE FAMILY

Among the best customers of the United States are our territorial and island possessions. Last year Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands bought $235,000,000 worth of goods from the continental U.S.A. They bought three times as much from us as did all the Central American countries together, and 73 per cent as much as all of South America, although the latter region has 89,000,000 inhabitants and our possessions only 2,500,000.

What did Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands buy of us? Just about everything from automobiles to chewing gum. The complete list would show the most diversified assortment of products which this country shipped to any customer in the world.

If trade with European and Asiatic countries becomes increasingly restricted because of war, or their own dwindling power to buy, we will grow more appreciative of the peaceful regions with which we can still trade, our own possessions and territories and the other countries of this hemisphere.

A BLITZKREIG FAILS

Those German troops who seized the Norwegian seaport of Narvik seem to be "in the middle," as our gangsters would say. There are several thousand of them, and at last reports they were still in command of the seaport. But their provision ships had been sunk. There were blockading warships outside of the harbor. The railroad leading inland to the ore mines they wanted was blocked a dozen miles outside of the city by the blowing up of a railroad tunnel by the Norwegians. That left them besieged by land and sea.

The desperate plight of that military expedition may be typical of the plight of the dictator who sent it there. Hitler himself must be desperate when he launches such a rash venture as his Norwegian campaign. It was exposed necessarily to the strength of British sea power, and was certain to bring armed resistance from the Norwegians, and eventually the Swedes, too, unless every step in the complex plan succeeded quickly.

At last a "Blitzkrieg" apparently has failed. The Nazi Napoleon seems to have played into Britain's hands. This may be the turn of the tide of conquest.

TOO MUCH SPECIALIZATION?

Maybe this generation is carrying specialized skill too far. It is the case in engineering, at least, insists Ernest E. Thum, editor of Metal Progress. "The undoubted trend of technical or engineering schools in the last ten years," he says, "has been toward specialized courses for the technician rather than courses for the leader or planner whom we like to call engineer."

He doesn't know, though, whether anything can be done about it, because industry today appears to need "technicians, machine tenders and machine supervisors rather than engineers."

Some doctors complain likewise about the growing specialization in the medical profession. It becomes harder and harder, they say, to find a physician who treats "the whole patient" instead of treating some small part of him. There are now said to be signs of a revival of the old idea that when a person is ailing, it's usually more than just a small section of him that's sick—that the whole patient may need the attention of an expert trained to regard the man or woman as a complete unit.

These, however, are high matters that a layman shouldn't meddle with.

There's one nice thing about that European war—both sides, according to their broadcasts, are so thoroughly satisfied with their progress.

CAUSE OF IRRITABLE BOWEL

It is rather hard for the average individual to understand what is true when a manufacturer of health foods states that the large bowel or intestine should have three movements a day—one after each meal—and a high authority who has given the intestine extensive study, states that a bowel movement twice a week may be all that is necessary to maintain health.

It is said that as a nation we have become "bowel conscious" and believe that unless the bowel moves once or twice a day something should be done about it. The result is that thousands, hundreds of thousands, in fact, have disordered bowel or colon action, unstable colon, the symptoms of which vary considerably.

Dr. M. C. Morrison, London, Ontario, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal states that the colon may have too much or not enough tone, so that in some places it will be of small calibre and in others large, so that it looks like the inner tube of a tire with large bulges at different points.

The symptoms of unstable colon or irritable colon include gas distension, or passing of much gas. There is distress in the abdomen with or without shifting, cramp-like pains. Headache, nausea, and vomiting are reported in a considerable percentage, while weight loss, dizziness, early fatigue and loss of appetite are not uncommon symptoms. Nearly all the patients describe abnormal stools. Ribbon like, in sections, dry, watery, or with mucus. The like, in sections, dry, watery, or with mucus. The like, in sections, dry, watery, or with mucus. The like, in sections, dry, watery, or with mucus.

Treatment is to avoid rough foods and to acquire calmness of spirit.

Dr. Morrison suggests that much time, money, and worry will be saved by an X-ray examination with a barium enema which "offers a simple and reliable method of estimating condition of the bowel and the presence of this 'unstable' or 'irritable' condition."

The barium will show that no organic disease is present but that the cause of the trouble is usually due to one of two factors or both. First, the patient has been taking too much rough foods or purgatives, second, he is having emotional upsets—worry, fatigue, and fear of organic disease.

Treatment is to avoid rough foods and to acquire calmness of spirit.

MOTHS AND THE FLAME

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Forty years ago folks in Kingston took their politics seriously. The year 1899 was marked by a rousing political battle between James E. Phinney, Republican, and Mayor William D. Brinrier, Democrat, who sought re-election to the mayor's chair, but was swept out of office by the voters who gave Mr. Phinney a majority of 904 votes over his Democratic opponent.

Mayor Phinney, who resided on Delaware avenue in Ponckhockie, assumed his duties on January 1, 1900, and it is interesting to note that 40 years later his son, Charles Phinney, was elevated to the post of chief of police of Kingston's police department, succeeding J. Allan Wood, who retired in 1939.

The campaign of 1899 was exceedingly hot and bitter with both sides slinging charges at one another. There were three newspapers in the field at that time. The Freeman, The Leader and the now defunct Express. A perusal of their editorial pages show the bitterness of the campaign that was waged.

Not only did the Republican party regain control of the office of mayor but it also regained control of the common council, electing 12 of the 18 aldermen. In those early days the city was divided into nine wards with two aldermen from each ward.

As long ago as 1900 Mayor Phinney in assuming office in his annual message anticipated the creation of a board of public works to have control of the streets and sewers of the city, but that board did not come into being until some years later during the administration of the late Mayor Palmer Canfield, Jr.

Mayor Phinney in his first annual message to the common council on New Year's Day, 1900, wrote in part as follows: "In my opinion the indiscriminate and unsystematic expenditure of money on our streets should be discontinued, and I believe that a majority of our people will agree with me that the remedy for this evil is the creation of a permanent department or board to have charge of all streets and sewer construction and other public improvements, clothed with the necessary power."

To carry out the program outlined in his message, Mayor Phinney recommended an amendment to the city charter.

At the turn of the century taxes were also low for the tax rate for 1900 was $18.40 per thousand valuation, which included not only the general city tax but the school tax as well.

It was not until years later during the Canfield administration that rising tax rates made it necessary to separate the general city tax and the school tax so that the taxpayer would have a breathing spell between tax paying periods.

The total assessed valuation in Kingston was $13,055,384.

Judge Frederick Stephan, Jr. for over half a century counsel of the Homeowners Cooperative and Savings Loan Association was active in politics in those early days and in 1899 he was re-elected city judge without opposition.

Life as lived in the Gay Nineties still held over in the early 1900's and there are still many residents of Kingston who recall the days when trolley cars still ran on Broadway and the advent of the automobile was still in the future.

This series of sketches will attempt to highlight the events and the personalities who help make history in Kingston at the turn of the century.

Farm Problem

Omaha, Neb.—Joe Marconcini, owner of the Square Deal Produce Company, got a raw deal when he bought two cases of eggs from a "farmer."

Unpacking he found eggs on the top layer and potatoes in the lower layers of the crates.

As well. It was not until years later during the Canfield administration that rising tax rates made it necessary to separate the general city tax and the school tax so that the taxpayer would have a breathing spell between tax paying periods.

The total assessed valuation in Kingston was $13,055,384.

Another barrage against the Walter-Logan bill released lately in the Senate committee "nobody understands it." Laymen who read it are said to have difficulty in knowing what it means. But legislation designed to perfect court procedure, or in this instance, the rules of conduct of governmental commissions are not written in words of one syllable because law-making traditionally must use technical terms in describing procedural problems.

Likewise if failure of laymen to understand a piece of proposed legislation ever had been the criterion, the New Deal would never have been able to get the public utility holding company act, the securities and exchange act or the administrative provisions of its various tax laws through Congress.

The most amusing argument being made against the Walter-Logan bill is that it "makes work for lawyers." Coming as this does from administration supporters it has furnished the only bit of comic relief in the whole legislative session. For if there is one administration which has swelled the pockets of the lawyers, accountants and technical experts and thus increased the expenses of doing business in America, it is the New Deal and its legislation.

Take the case of the securities and exchange commission which requires a registration prospectus for every loan above $100,000. The Walter-Logan bill is really feared by the radicals here. It is the first sign of a fair deal that has been written into a proposed piece of legislation in a long while. Naturally it will cramp the style of the bureaucrats and will provide a check against arbitrary power. The theory that a citizen should find redress in a court or that sensible legislation should safeguard his rights seems to have been forgotten by certain New Deal agencies in their zeal to exercise governmental power in accordance with individual caprice or economic bias.

The public can understand the difference between a raw deal and a fair deal. It's a simple issue to explain. The language of the Walter-Logan bill itself will not be debated on the stump, but only the record of abuse and prejudice which has cast such a disheartening blot on the record of those who call themselves "liberals."

Now there is regrettably to be added some of the old tactics of the reactionaries in killing legislation in the Senate committee rather than facing it openly and amending it in the public interest.

The Republican party can draw on this simple issue many independent voters to its banner this year in the congressional elections and defeat several senators and representatives who will have gone on record as opposed to a fair deal and a fair hearing for the citizen. Presidential vetoes have often become campaign issues before. It would be surprising if the administration leaders misjudged the temper of public opinion after the 3 to 1 vote in the House the other day and tried to squelch the Walter-Logan bill.

Events Are Shaping Themselves to Make Abuse of Public Power Chief Issue in Campaign

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, April 25.—Events are shaping themselves here to make the paramount issue of the coming Presidential and Congressional campaign the question of abuse of public power.

The Republicans have been slow to develop the lines of attack, but the administration leadership is virtually playing into the hands of its opponents. Thus two major pieces of legislation—the Walter-Logan bill and the amendments to the Wagner labor law—turn wholly on the question of a fair deal for the citizen.

But intimations are given publicly that the administration is trying to prevent action in the Senate by persuading its supporters to squelch the measures in committee, or, failing this, the President is expected to veto the bills. Senator Barkley, majority leader, says he wants the bill vetoed if passed by the Senate.

The tactics being followed by the administration supporters are transparently obstructive. Thus, if the Logan-Walter bill as passed by the House is not satisfactory, the normal course would be to rewrite it in the Senate and send the bill to conference. But the administration, while conceding that the objectives of the measure are sound, prefers to kill the bill altogether.

The campaign against the measure has been going on for several months. The first contention has been that time was needed for further study and particularly to wait for the report of a special committee appointed by the administration itself a year ago. But, as Senator Hatch of New Mexico, Democrat, who has taken up the cudgels in the Senate for the bill points out, the administration has had more than a year in which to "study" the bill and to suggest changes.

Another barrage against the Walter-Logan bill released lately in the Senate committee "nobody understands it." Laymen who read it are said to have difficulty in knowing what it means. But legislation designed to perfect court procedure, or in this instance, the rules of conduct of governmental commissions are not written in words of one syllable because law-making traditionally must use technical terms in describing procedural problems.

Likewise if failure of laymen to understand a piece of proposed legislation ever had been the criterion, the New Deal would never have been able to get the public utility holding company act, the securities and exchange act or the administrative provisions of its various tax laws through Congress.

The most amusing argument being made against the Walter-Logan bill is that it "makes work for lawyers." Coming as this does from administration supporters it has furnished the only bit of comic relief in the whole legislative session. For if there is one administration which has swelled the pockets of the lawyers, accountants and technical experts and thus increased the expenses of doing business in America, it is the New Deal and its legislation.

Take the case of the securities and exchange commission which requires a registration prospectus for every loan above $100,000. The

Skipper Reports On City's Capture

New York, April 25 (AP)—Captain William McHale, skipper of the American freighter Mormacsea, disclosed today that a small force of about 500 Germans captured Trondheim, Norway, on the morning of April 9 "and walked in unmolested."

The German invaders, he said, landed from the battle cruiser Von Hipper and from three destroyers, seizing the strategic Norwegian port at 5 a. m.

"The people appeared to be stunned," the captain said. "They offered no resistance. There were no Norwegian soldiers in sight."

Capt. McHale, who brought his ship back here today, said the German troops, as they went ashore, carried machine guns and thousands of boxes, apparently containing machine-gun ammunition.

One German plane roared overhead as the troops landed.

Capt. McHale brought his ship into New York harbor after a perilous voyage through the mine-infested North Sea. On leaving Trondheim he was warned by the German commander that he sailed "on your own responsibility."

The Mormacsea was the first ship to reach the United States from the Scandinavian war zone since hostilities broke out there on April 9.

Rotary Club Holds Past Presidents' Day at Luncheon

Rotary and naturally as the result of lobby conversations with them I became interested in Rotary. In 1915, it was my good fortune to have won a delegate credential to the Aetna-Izers Convention held that year in San Francisco, Cal., and as we journeyed across the continent, I came in contact with several insurance men who were members of Rotary clubs in the New England states. They all were boosters for Rotary which further increased my interest in the organization.

Back in 1915, many of my evenings were spent in bowling at the Y. M. C. A. in company with Willis Hills, and on two or three different evenings while we were engaged in bowling, Willis related to me the good times he had enjoyed at the meetings of the Albany Rotary Club. These meetings highly enthused Willis and he seemed more than anxious to help organize a club in Kingston. It was but a short time after these talks, it so happened that during the exchange of business relations between Dr. Frank Keator and myself, Dr. Keator brought up the subject of Rotary, he having recently attended a meeting of the Utica Rotary Club and expressed himself sold on the Rotary idea.

As I recall it, it was some time in January, 1916, at the suggestion of Willis Hills, Dr. Keator, Willis and myself met one evening at the Y. M. C. A. and discussed the advisability of taking steps to organize a Rotary Club in Kingston. We decided to proceed cautiously and first determine if there was sufficient interest on the part of the professional and business men of Kingston in such an organization, and to help us to determine this question, the self-appointed committee of three held an evening dinner meeting at the Y. M. C. A., ten men attending it. Considerable interest was manifested in Rotary by these men, but to avoid making the mistake of starting something which we could not finish, a subsequent meeting, attended by twenty men, was held when it was definitely decided to proceed with the organization work. I was delegated the privilege of asking International Rotary for the necessary organization papers, but much to my surprise, we learned that papers of this character had been previously issued by William F. Hoechn, then secretary of our Chamber of Commerce, and before anything could be done by our group towards organizing the club, we found it necessary to have the papers in the hands of Mr. Hoechn returned to International headquarters; when this was done, new organization papers were issued to us.

The next step was the organization meeting, but before holding such a meeting, it was deemed advisable to hold a "get-together" meeting. Invitations were extended to William Gettlinger, then International Vice-President, and to the members of the Albany Rotary Club. This "get-together" meeting was held at Hotel Eichler on Saturday evening March 25th 1916; it was attended by 31 members of the Albany Rotary Club, International Vice President Gettlinger, William J. Beamish, then secretary of the New York Rotary Club, and 32 invited business and professional men of Kingston. George Elwell, president of the Albany Rotary Club, presided, and it was a most successful meeting. We were told by the Rotarians who attended this meeting what Rotary stood for and some of its principles. It was made plain to us that Rotary was no booze club, that Rotary was never intended to take the place of our Chamber of Commerce, or any similar organization; that the field which Rotary invades is not covered by a Chamber of Commerce, nor by any fraternity; it was not an organization for profit and any one who joined it with that object and purpose in view, sooner or later would find he had made a mistake. To quote the words of Dr. George Dugan, at that time a member of the Albany Rotary Club and who later became one of our most popular District Governors, Dr. Dugan said, "Rotary is an organization where men of every nation and creed can meet on, clean, common level. Rotary stands for SERVICE to our fellowmen."

The inspiration which this Saturday night meeting left with us was echoed at our organization meeting held on Wednesday, March 29th, 1916. This meeting was also at Hotel Eichler and was attended by 30 men. Dr. George Chandler, Walter P. Crane, Palmer Canfield, Jr., Dr. Frank Keator, Frank B. Seeley and Willis Hills were elected directors, who, in turn elected Willis Hills president, which honor rightfully belonged to him. The first year of our club's existence was a hard one—many disappointments were experienced due to poorly attended meetings and committees failing to function much of which could be attributed to lack of sufficient interest by the members in the work of our club. At one time it seemed our efforts were leading to failure and that it might be necessary for us to return our charter to International headquarters with a piece of crepe tied to it. I recall one meeting in particular where only twelve men gathered for luncheon; no speaker or entertainment provided for by the entertainment committee which was nothing unusual in those days; after the luncheon was served the meeting ended—a complete failure, but notwithstanding these difficulties, Willis Hills had sufficient faith in Rotary to stick to his job as president. In discussing Rotary problems with him one afternoon in his office, he made this remark: "We will have a Rotary Club in Kingston if only you and I attend the meetings."

Kingston Rotary was fortunate in having Willis Hills for its first president, for, as I see it, it was due to his firm yet kindly leadership that Kingston Rotary continued to exist. Willis believed in Rotary principles and he lived them and two mottoes, "Service above self" and "Let me live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man."

Petition Is Unopposed

No one appeared to oppose the petition of David Davis to have the premises at 43 Cedar street changed from a residential to a business zone under the city zoning act, at the public hearing held by the city hall Wednesday evening by the laws and rules committee of the common council. Attorney James G. Connelly appeared for Mr. Davis, and as there was no opposition to the petition it is expected that the committee will submit a report at the May meeting of the council recommending that the petition be granted.

Electrical Lens For Wirephoto Is New A.P. Device

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, April 25.—An electrical lens, a new photographic device for wirephoto, the pictures sent by wire, was announced today by the Associated Press.

This electrical lens does for wire pictures what panchromatic film did for photography a few years ago—eliminates the formless blacks and replaces them with natural details.

A difficulty in pictures sent by wire has been that at the receiving end, where the electricity was changed back into light, the film failed to give good reproduction of the darker areas of the original photograph.

An example is a new photograph of Postmaster General Farley, wearing a black coat. In the ordinary wirephoto this coat was little better than a dark smear. But the same photo received with the electric lens shows clearly the texture of the weave and even the precisely tailored threads in the coat buttons.

Details More Distinct

Details in the tangles of plane and train wrecks show up more distinctly. In a photograph of the April 8 Detroit gas explosion, a street scene with a large crowd in the background, the electric lens brought up distant faces so that they would have been identifiable.

The new principle is so flexible that it could be adjusted to give a negro a white face while preserving unchanged the usual light-colored portions of the photograph.

The invention was conceived and perfected in the Associated Press research laboratory by James C. Barnes, Alfred G. Gano and Charles W. Hubley, electrical engineers, working under direction of H. M. Biele, AP chief engineer.

The idea was under consideration for three years. Working it out took three months. The experimenting was done with photographs of actresses wearing gorgeous costumes, the details of the gowns furnishing critical material for wire transmission.

The lens has been used in New York to receive wire pictures from all parts of the United States. It is expected to be in production soon, and to go to wirephoto newspapers in about three months.

A week ago the research department announced a new scanning tube, for the sending end of wire pictures. This tube collects 16 times as much light as previously available for conversion into the electric current that telegraphs a picture.

The electrical lens announced today is considered the most important single improvement since wirephoto was inaugurated in 1935.

Replevin Action Is Up for Trial

An action in replevin brought by Clarence L. Schoonmaker of town of Gardiner against George Carman of the same town was taken up for trial this morning before Judge Paul Fromer in county court. Peter H. Harp and A. J. Cook appeared for the plaintiff and Roger H. Loughran and George F. Kaufman for the defendant. Plaintiff Schoonmaker claims that a herd of cows was loaned to Carman some time ago under an agreement but that in returning the cattle all of the stock mentioned in the agreement was not returned. The action is brought to recover the remaining cattle, offspring of the original herd. Plaintiff asks that if the stock cannot be returned that he be compensated in money for the value of the stock which he claims is due him. The defendant worked for the plaintiff at one time and later started a herd of his own. The loan of the fourteen head of stock took place in 1932. Involved in the case are principally the young stock or offspring of the original herd.

Veal canned for the 1824 article expedition of Sir William Perry was found in perfect condition when opened recently in the museum of the Royal United Service Institution in London.

Bad Case of Ill Luck
 Owingsville, Ky. (AP)—Robert Johnson, 33, truck driver, had all his ups and downs at one time. It started when he fell asleep and his truck overturned on a curve. Dazed after the accident, he sat down on nearby railroad tracks. A passerby led him away. The rescuer thought Johnson was recovered. But the injured man walked out on the highway and was struck by another truck. He wound up, finally, in a hospital with a broken nose, a fractured leg and cuts and bruises in profusion.

Children's Drive For Children

The little red school house, fountain-head of old-fashioned Americanism, has joined the Children's Crusade for Children.

More than 130,000 one and two-room schools from Maine to California, 50,000 three to five-room schools, and hundreds of consolidated county schools this week began their activities in connection with the Crusade which culminates in the classrooms of the United States beginning Monday, April 22 and extending through Tuesday April 30. The announcement of participation in this nation-wide movement by American elementary and high school pupils was issued this week by Dorothy Canfield Fisher of Arlington, Vermont chairman of the Crusade, and one of America's outstanding novelists. The Children's Crusade for Children is being sponsored by leaders of farm organizations throughout the country. These farm leaders include Mrs. H. W. Ahart, president of the Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau Federation, Mrs. Gladys Talbot Edwards, Director of the Junior Department of the Farmers Education and Cooperative Union, and L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange.

The twofold aim of the Children's Crusade, according to Crusade headquarters located in the Empire State Building, New York city, is: "first, to help the homeless and orphaned children of war-stricken lands in their growing, tragic need; second, through understanding the plight of these children, to dramatize for our American children the blessings of American institutions and ideals, too often taken for granted by adults as well as children, free speech, free education, free assembly and freedom of conscience."

The school boys and girls of the village of Perkinsville, Vermont, started the Children's Crusade of 1940. Mrs. Fisher relates. Distressed by the plight of the children abroad, these youngsters saved their pennies and dispatched the sum of $5.69 to Mrs. Fisher, asking her to use their pennies to help the children without a country. "We are not rich," said the delegation of youngsters that waited on Mrs. Fisher at her home in Arlington, "but at least we have a government and country that cares for us and that worries about us. We have our mothers and fathers who haven't been taken from us by war or persecution."

From this beginning the Children's Crusade for Children has quickly developed into a national, humanitarian movement through the school-rooms ranging from the country schools to the large, metropolitan system including New York city. Educators, authors, librarians, civic leaders and representatives of the great women's organizations and religious associations have endorsed the Crusade and are cooperating in its work. Cooperating in the work of the Crusade are representative organizations of young people such as the 4-H Clubs, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Girl Reserves of the YWCA, the Camp Fire Girls the Hi-Y Clubs of the YMCA, as well as the leading farm youth groups.

School children who will contribute a penny for each of the years they have lived in this democratic land, or anything down to a cent, will have their money forwarded by their principals or teachers, to two country banks which are the national depositories of the Children's Crusade. For schools west of the Mississippi, the Citizens National Bank of Emporia, Kansas, and for schools east of the Mississippi, the County National Bank of Bennington, Vermont, will receive the funds. All contributions will be voluntary.

The money raised will be apportioned among responsible, established agencies in every field of relief—Protestant, Roman Catholic, Jewish and non-sectarian, by an independent Jury of Award. Members of the Jury of Award are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, Emporia, Kansas; Chief Judge Irving Lehman of the N. Y. State Court of Appeals; Dr. Charles B. Glenn, Superintendent of Schools, Birmingham, Alabama, formerly president, American Association of School Administrators; The Rt. Rev. Monsignor John A. Ryan, director, National Catholic Welfare Conference; Caroline S. Woodruff of Castleton, Vermont, formerly president, National Education Association, and Dorothy Canfield Fisher, national chairman of the Crusade.

More than one million collection cans have been contributed by the Can Manufacturers Institute and the producers of tin plate. Norman Rockwell has contributed the attractive poster for the Crusade. The Crusade officials announce that expenses of the Crusade campaign are being privately underwritten, thus making it possible for every cent collected from an American child to go directly to relief.

Orders for Over 13 Million Trees

Albany, April 25 — More than 4,500 orders calling for the distribution of over 13 million trees have been received by the Conservation Department for this spring. Shipments of young trees to be used by individuals, municipalities and various counties throughout the state in spring planting programs are moving rapidly. Because of the severe winter conditions experienced at Saratoga and Lowville nurseries, officials said that up to last week it had been impossible to dig the young trees from the ground and shipments have necessarily been held up. However, it is expected that all trees now on order will be sent out before May 15.

Orders for young trees this spring have greatly exceeded the demand of any recent year. The previous peak year occurred a year ago and at that time during the spring season 3,800 orders were received and 10,800,000 trees utilized in private reforestation programs.

With still about two weeks to run, the large number of orders have already depleted some of the supply and only white and red pines remain in stock.

The increase in orders was attributed by department officials to several reasons, the most important being the federal agricultural conservation program now in effect. Under this program, farmers planting idle land with young forest trees receive specified payments from the federal government. Payments for reforestation are made at the rate of $7.50 an acre up to a maximum allowance of $30 to any one individual farmer meeting the requirements of the federal program.

More than 2,500 patents have been granted in the past 50 years on schemes to replace wooden railroad ties. Not one of the devices has been as cheap or as good.

Let's call a spade A SPADE!

If a Ham Isn't JUICY When You Buy It, How Can It Be JUICY When It's Served?

There's just one answer to that question... IT CAN'T BE!

You can start with dry bread and produce some mighty fine poultry dressing. You can take well-aged, crumbly cheese and turn out an excellent rarebit. BUT, when you start your dinner getting with a dry piece of ham, that's exactly what you end up with... and frankly, dry, crumbly ham doesn't carve very well, and it certainly isn't appetizing!

After all, cooking of any kind tends to drive moisture from the food that's being prepared... so the more natural juices you have to start with, the more you'll have left when it's time to serve the ham!

The point we'd like to make is this: First Prize Tenderized Hams are cured according to an exclusive curing method developed by the Albany Packing Company... cured in a manner that retains all the natural tasty juices of the ham. Those juices are there when you buy your First Prize Ham... and since First Prize Hams are Tenderized, they require less cooking, and therefore less moisture is lost during the cooking process, leaving them deliciously juicy and amazingly tender when they're served.

Next time you buy a ham, do yourself a favor... insist upon FIRST PRIZE TENDERIZED HAM and accept no substitutes!

Not The Cheapest, But The BEST!

Mackenzie Says Swedes Face Zero Hour; Tells How '5th Column' Works

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

With the allied and Nazi forces in Norway finally getting into the full swing of their military operations, after preliminary preparations, the danger of a German invasion of Sweden becomes more pressing.

Indeed, an authorized source in Berlin this morning declared that the hour for Sweden's "decision" (presumably as to whether she will side with the Reich) is approaching.

This came on top of the French announcement that the Nazis have been loading troops on transports in Baltic ports just opposite Sweden, giving further grim warning that the Scandinavian country's time of trial may be near.

We shouldn't overlook the possibility that this is a distraction to cover a projected assault on Holland, or perhaps in the Balkans. However, the position of Sweden remains precarious.

I should say that the chances of invasion would increase or decrease in accordance with the success of German operations in Norway. If things go well for the Nazis they may hold their hand against Sweden; if the battle runs against them, they likely will strike quicker.

Are Standing at Arms

The Swedes are standing at arms, and are said to be set to defend themselves to the full extent of their ability. This should be very considerable so far as land operations are concerned.

Unfortunately, however, the invaders probably will depend largely on their air fleet to blast the unhappy country into submission. In a war with a major power like Germany, Sweden would be as exposed to air attacks as was little Finland.

But the Swedes must face another peril which can be even more devastating than bombs—the ghostly worker known as the "fifth column." Some call it the "Trojan horse."

As the threat against Sweden was boiling up I received a telegram from the Manchester (N. H.) Leader, suggesting that I discuss the "fifth column," and I know no better time to say a word about this astonishing epidemic which is sweeping all Europe, and even has cropped up in the Dutch East Indies and other far countries.

Subversive in Nature

The fifth column is a phrase used to describe underground, subversive activities within a country by foreign political interests.

The term originated in Spain during the civil war. The insurgents boasted that they had four columns of troops converging on the enemy in Madrid, and that a "fifth column" (meaning secret agents and supporters) was working for them from within the capital.

The mission of the fifth column is to pave the way to deliver over to its own government the government of the country being undermined. This might mean the actual loss of sovereignty, or merely the seizing of political or economic control over the victim.

Here it should be said that the employment of the fifth column isn't peculiar to any one country. A lot of them use it.

Communism, for instance, long was the prize bete noir of many countries. Even now England is said to be considering a proposal to outlaw Bolshevism. France outlawed this "ism" just after the Russo-German pact was signed.

Reds Are Outstripped

The Reds, however, have been outstripped as briers. Europe has just awakened to the fact that the Nazis have developed this art so intensely and so successfully that the old world is fairly honeycombed with it. It is no exaggeration to say that many countries are in a state of panic over the situation.

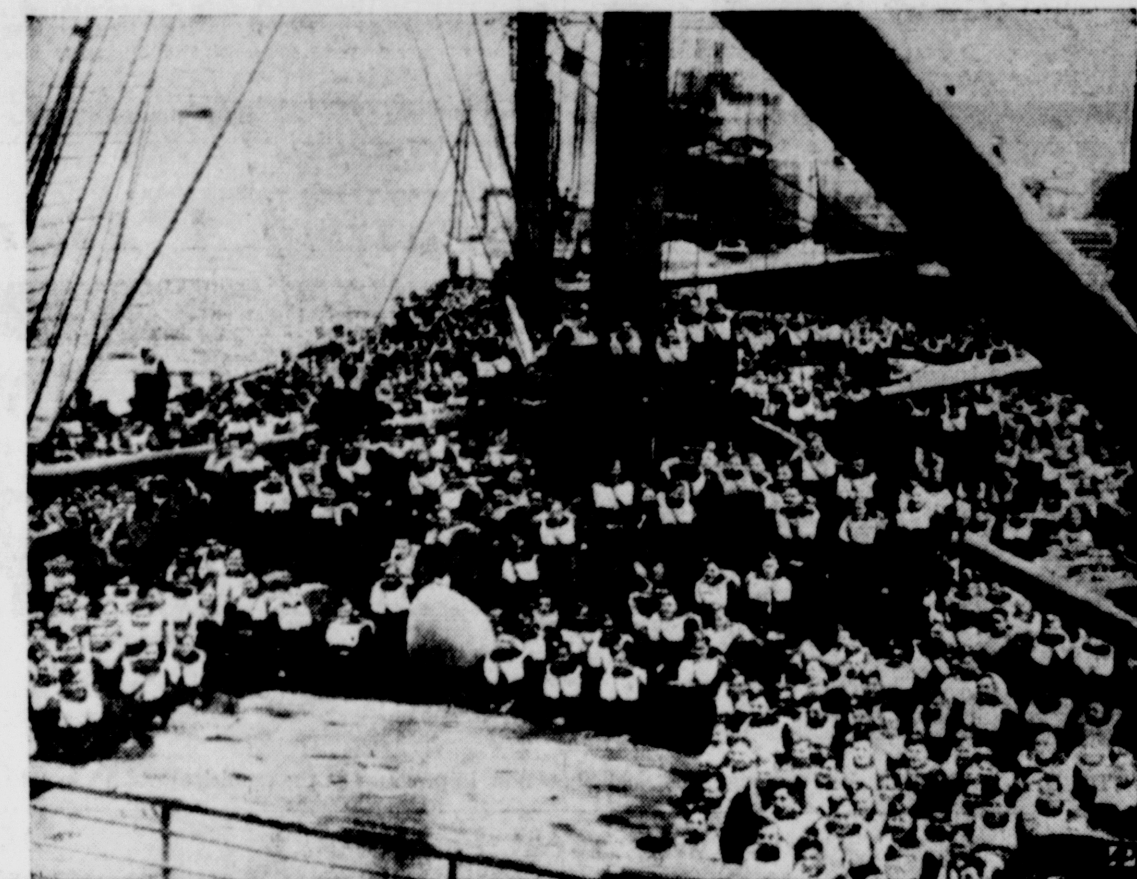

The fifth column technique is to send into a country all sorts of agents—tourists, teachers, businessmen, settlers, and what not. These folk inspire the formation of Nazi (or whatever the ism is) political parties, get hold of official positions in organizations and impel them to work for German interests, preach the Nazi doctrine to young people and organize youth movements, and in a hundred other ways serve the fuhrer.

Something over a year ago when I toured 14 countries of Europe I found the Nazi ferment working everywhere. It required the Nazi fifth column coup in Norway, however, to wake other nations up and set them to searching their own cellars frantically. Most of them have found plenty.

At this moment from England right across the continent to the Balkans and on down into Turkey, countries are feverishly trying to free themselves of this growth. Arrests and expulsions are going forward apace, especially in the Balkans, upon which Hitler has been depending so much for supplies to help him defeat the allied blockade.

Still, Sweden has had ample warning and while she presumably will encounter trouble from Nazi elements she ought not to be caught by the same ruses that fooled the Norwegians.

BRITISH REINFORCEMENTS REACH NORWAY

Closely crowded on the deck of a transport ship, British soldiers wearing life jackets are shown in this radiophoto as they arrived off Norway to join the war against the Nazis. Another transport is visible following close behind. Photo was radioed from London to New York.

Insanity Increase in U. S. Is Traced to 'Depression'

The depression has been one of the causes for the apparent increase in insanity in the United States, according to Dr. J. F. Bateman, Ohio commissioner of mental diseases.

Surveys show that the general rise in insanity is in line with increased population, he said, but added that thousands of new patients are entering mental hospitals every month.

"One out of every 22 persons may be expected to spend some part of his life in a hospital for mental disease," Dr. Bateman said. One out of every 331 persons in the United States is now a patient in a state hospital and if the present rate of mental breakdown continues, approximately 1,000,000 of the children now in our public schools will be admitted to mental hospitals at some time in their lives."

During the depression years in Ohio, for example, the number of mental patients increased from 1 out of every 302 persons to 1 in every 275.

Dr. Bateman said that the effect of the depression on the mental and emotional life of the unemployed was "too obvious."

"While disaster in certain instances brings out the best in man," he said, "the loss of self-respect, increased family tension, increased difficulty in sex adjustment, lowered standards of living, malnutrition—all these factors arising from the prolonged depression have taken a heavy toll in terms of mental health," he explained.

The fact that people live longer now than a few years ago has been a factor which seems to push the insanity curve upward, he said. The depression years made this more noticeable.

"Simple cases of senility and other mild mental conditions were, to a large extent, cared for at home," the commissioner said. "But with the economic crisis, when the son or daughter was unable to assume responsibility for the care of a mother or grandfather, then the state hospitals had to take care of the aged people."

Wild West 'Rustlers' Lose Their Glamour

Rustlers is the romantic western term for cattle thieves. No western story is complete without a group of these hawk-eyed, hard-faced long-riders, in their dark, well-worn clothing, mounted on fleet bay or black broncs, galloping through its pages. The reasons for the inconspicuous colors are obvious. Only a "drugstore cowboy" wore a bright scarf, big white sombrero and jingling spurs, and rode a pinto or palomino. The six-gun was the favorite weapon of these tough hombres, as the squirrel rifle was of the feudists of the Great Smokies.

The stolen herds were driven south of the border and delivered to some crooked buyer with a beef contract to fill, or through a secret passage into a hidden valley, there to be rebranded and later sold.

There are still cattle as well as dude ranches in the West and there are still rustlers, but most of the picturesque features are gone. Now the thieves load their gather on trucks and transport them swiftly to their destination.

Nor have these operations been confined to the West. Every summer a number of cattle are lost from pastures in the East, particularly in New York state, near Malone, Fowler and Gouverneur. More than a dozen head were stolen in the vicinity of the latter place during the summer of 1939, but fortunately the thieves were apprehended.

Rocking Chair's Invention

How many of us have lounged comfortably in an old rocking chair, perhaps a dark Victorian mahogany piece with its machine age caricature of Empire style and wondered who first thought of putting rockers on chairs? It is likely that we will never know for sure. Although Benjamin Franklin was most probably the inventor, it seems passing strange that it took three or four hundred years and an ingenious American to transfer the rocker from the cradle to a chair! Supporting the Franklin tradition is the description of a call on Franklin by Rev. Manasseh Cutler on July 13, 1787: "He also showed us his long artificial arm and hand for taking down and putting books up on shelves, and his great armed chair with rockers . . . and many other curiosities and inventions, all his own but of lesser note." Reverend Cutler falls just short of saying in actual words that Franklin had originated this most amazing chair.

Hedge Aids Home Appearance

The privacy and frequently the appearance of a home may be improved by a wall or fence along the lot lines or by a hedge. This improvement is relatively inexpensive. The kind of enclosure used can be determined by the type of architecture of the house. Colonial cottages and frame houses in general call for a white picket fence or neatly clipped hedge. The fences may be selected from many styles ranging from the least expensive type of plain flat pickets to the more ornate style with rounded pickets and flange gate. Brick dwellings of Georgian architecture are best framed by masonry walls. These may be any height desired, according to conditions. Spanish or Mediterranean homes are best complemented by a stucco wall, although hedges of various types are used effectively.

Bull Markets Hold 7th Anniversary

The Great Bull Markets are this week celebrating their seventh anniversary. This local food concern, with two large super markets in Kingston, has grown in this short time, from one market to five. The original market opened at Smith avenue and Grand street with the various departments leased as concessions, was one of the first self-service markets in the Hudson valley.

Six months later another market was opened in Poughkeepsie. With the acquisition of the H. B. Merritt store on Washington avenue, and the opening of another Bull Market in the old armory in Newburgh, the succession of food stores was raised to four two years later.

The success of the Poughkeepsie market led to the erection of another on Main street in the same city so that today the Bull Markets, Inc., owns and operates all departments in five big stores doing a combined business, which executives of the firm say, is exceeded by no other food organization in the Hudson valley. The company owns three of the buildings housing their markets, as well as a warehouse on Downs street, this city, and altogether employs more than 200 men and women.

LITTLE SPITFIRE

By Jean Randall

YESTERDAY: When Ned returns, Brenda dissuades him from knocking the tar out of Abner. The girl Ned is supporting is his half sister.

Chapter 19

"Dignified Baby"

BRENDA was weak with relief, and with laughter. What a grand joke this was on the omniscient Mac!

"Did you know your half sister?" she asked.

"Never heard of her until a year before my father died. His conscience bothered him, I expect. And anyway, he wanted her to have some money without making it public in a will. He shrugged his shoulders, apparently confident that he had said the last word on the subject. And indeed Brenda's quick wits filled in the gaps without difficulty.

"She made a bad marriage, lost her money, and applied to you for more. She named her baby after you—"

"No. For Dad."

"You're still supporting her, Ned?"

He flushed resentfully.

"It's my money, isn't it? I've got a right to spend it as I like!"

"You have indeed," she patted his arm. "Good for you, Ned. Heavens, I didn't realize how much I'd worried about that story."

"Um. But how is all this going to help me with Elaine? You say she doesn't know about Cynthia. Then what—"

"Let me think. Everyone has a dominant trait—a dominant weakness," said the young student of psychology. "What would you say Ab's is?"

"One and the same: his nuttiness over his farm."

"She looked a little baffled. "That doesn't seem to get us anywhere, does it? Unless... Does he have everything for it that he wants, Ned?"

"How the dickens do I know? He never asks me out there. But—" wait! Elaine did say that they're both simply frantic to have a little greenhouse so they can keep on with their experiments all the year around. What about it?"

Since she did not answer he swept her a quick glance; saw the dimples in full play, saw stars lighting her eyes.

"Well, out with it!" he commanded gruffly.

She shook her head.

"I want you to be able to say it was your idea. Ned! Think—"

"You mean I could build 'em a greenhouse—or a flock of greenhouses? But Ab Abernathy would have my heart's blood before he'd give his consent."

"Ab, yes; but the farm's only half his, isn't it?"

His tired young face brightened.

"I get you."

"I hope you do, for it's the last word I'm going to say on the subject. I," said Miss Burnham virtuously, "believe in tending strictly to my own affairs. Not for the world would I counsel you to an action which might be construed by the finicky as rank bribery."

He wrinkled his forehead in thought.

"That's all very well as far as it goes; but it takes time to build a greenhouse, even more time for it to exert a beneficial influence on the amateur botanist's heart. And I want to marry Elaine right now! Next week!"

"It's not to be considered. You mustn't think of rushing matters like that. Concentrate on imagining how many times you and she can drive out to see the greenhouse going up—consult over the plants to go in it."

"And if Ab raises the devil?"

"Show him the blueprints. Get Elaine to give you a list of cacti—all botanists seem to go mad over cacti. I can't imagine why—and flash it before his eyes. That'll fix him," she predicted confidently.

Blank and Defeated

THEY drove for an hour longer, perfecting their plans. He helped her out at her own door just as Mac's shabby car drew up.

"I'll wait until he warns me against Don Juan Barrow, and then I'll give him the surprise of his life," Brenda assured herself, with relish.

But Mac did no warning. He merely greeted them both pleasantly and held the door open for her to precede him into the house. She felt oddly blank and somehow defeated.

Adelaide came out into the hall to greet them.

"There's a man been telephoning you, Brenda," she said. "A friend of yours from New York. He wants you to call him at The Shelton, Graham's his name."

"Phil Graham?" There was genuine pleasure in her voice.

"Oh, I hope it's Phil! May I ask him out to dinner, Adelaide?"

But when she got him at the big hotel where he was staying, it seemed he had plans of his own for the evening.

"We're dining and dancing here at The Shelton," he informed her. "Good food, special orchestra tonight, everything. Jump into your prettiest frock and I'll be out in an hour. And ask your landlady for a key. It's likely to be the wee sma' hours before you get back."

It was fun, dressing for a party again. She was glad she had brought along the rose brocade with its matching evening coat. Aunt Anne had considered it too old for her but Brenda herself reveled in the lustrous folds of the lovely gown, in its smart lines, and the small crushed roses which held it on her white shoulders.

When she had brushed her black curls until they shone like satin, and fastened on the long swinging earrings of rose coral, she gazed with satisfaction at herself in the mirror.

"I look at least twenty-seven, and dangerous!"

Not for the world would she have admitted her real reason for coming downstairs to await Phil's rings. Nevertheless it did not displease her that Mac and Eric were spending the last ten minutes before dinner in the living room.

Eric looked up with a low whistle of astonishment.

"Holy cats! Whom have we here?"

"I'm going out to dinner," she explained carelessly. Her coat was over one bare arm. She refused Eric's proffered chair with a shake of her head. "No use to sit down, I have only a minute or two."

Isobel was frankly envious. "What a dress! Brenda! I'll bet it came from Paris. It's too old for you but that's all to the good. It makes you look like a dignified baby. Doesn't it, Mac?"

"It's very becoming."

He spoke quietly but the girl observed with satisfaction that his eyes had not left her since she entered the room. She had his attention at last, she thought with some excitement; not necessarily his approval, or admiration—she assured herself she had no desire to impress him; but she did want to have him take her seriously!

When Phil Graham came, she bade them all a radiant good night, and departed for an evening of high festivity.

"No Use To Argue"

"HAVE fun?" Mac inquired at the breakfast table. "I really didn't expect to see you down this morning. It was so late when you got in."

She lowered her lashes demurely. So Mac had been awake when she crept in a little before four!

"Heaps of fun! Phil's a grand dancer and a good friend. The floor and the orchestra were both good."

"Is he staying in town long?" asked Isobel.

Brenda looked at her wrist. "He's on his way south by now. Yes, what is it, Grenadine?"

"Telephone," announced the dusky damsel.

It was Hugh Saltus. "When are you coming to see me?" he demanded. "You haven't been near me since the day you shattered my peace of mind about—You said you'd try to think out a way to—help. Have you thought?"

"Not to any purpose, I'm afraid," she admitted. "But I'll run in for a few minutes before I start writing this morning and we'll talk it over. That do?"

He assented and Brenda returned to her breakfast. When, half an hour later, she started down The Street, Miss Ormond came grimly forth from her house and joined the girl.

"No use to argue," she said. "I won't interfere with your visit. I won't open my mouth if you'd rather I wouldn't; but let you go alone to that married man's studio I will not!"

So Brenda, her lips set demurely but the betraying dimples denoting their corners, paid her first chaperoned call on the cartoonist. Hugh looked amazed at sight of her companion, but he welcomed her courteously, seated her in the most comfortable chair.

He and the girl exchanged casual pleasantries for fifteen minutes while the grim figure of the ex-teacher kept watchful ward.

"Will you tell me the meaning of this, Brenda?" he inquired over the telephone when the call was over and the callers back in their respective homes. "Why did you bring the Ormond along? Did you think I might weep on your shoulder, or make love to you—or what?"

"It wasn't my idea, I assure you!" Brenda told him. "She told me that the next time I went to the studio she was coming with me—to chaperon me, you know."

Hugh swore disgustedly, and she chuckled.

"It's a laughing matter," he insisted. "I have to see you; I want to talk to you about—Linda. Have you heard again from your friend?"

"There was a letter waiting for me when I got back a few minutes ago. I haven't had time to read it yet."

Moose Mist

Fairbanks, Alaska (AP)—In freezing weather, moose sometimes look like a "cloud drifting along the ground," from an airplane. The big animals are almost obscured by the pall of mist which envelops them. Flier Frank Pollack reported: "It's their breath and heat from their bodies condensing. The huge beasts leave the higher regions, which lack timber and are exposed to storms, for lower areas with tree shelters and calmer atmosphere."

San Bernardino County, California, is the largest county in the country. Its area is 20,175 miles.

The Great I Am

I am the producer of all good things in life. Without me mankind must fail of happiness; the resources of the world would be empty and without value. I am behind every fortune, every art, every science, every advancement that man has ever made. Rich and poor have tried to dispense with me, but in doing so have lost the very heart of the happiness for which they sought. Because the creator is ever greater than the created, so am I greater than wealth, fame, power, or any other acquired possession of man. Without me there can be no riches, no learning, no achievement. I am the great developer of powers—the one agency which calls forth hidden forces of mind and body. I am WORK.

Man—My dear, I've just finished reading a book on "The Wonders of Nature." It's a remarkable work; it makes me think how insignificant man is.

Wife—Huh! A woman does not have to wade through 500 pages to discover that.

Heard a man say the other day he is out of debt, which isn't true. Every man, woman, and child in the United States is in debt almost $300, whatever that means.

We hope to get the day off.

Clerk—May I have next Monday off?

Boss—Why, may I ask?

Clerk—It's my silver wedding anniversary.

Boss—What! Are we going to have to put up with this every 25 years?

One way to get into a chaotic condition would be to take as much advice as we give.

From an old scrap book: When a duck lays an egg she waddles off as if nothing had happened. When a hen lays an egg there is a whale of a racket. The hen advertises. Hence the demand for hen's eggs, no ducks!

The doctor's new secretary on her first day at work saw a magnificent blonde carrying some papers enter the office smiling sweetly.

New Secretary (snarling)—If you try to muscle in on my territory I'll plant you among the potatoes.

The Other (sweetly)—Oh, don't mind me. I'm only the doctor's wife.

The joke was on somebody:

Four good fellows, old friends, met after long years in an old Southern town. They visited an inn and had several drinks. Then all four left for the railway station. On arrival at the train, three of the four got in and the train pulled out leaving the fourth fellow standing on the platform, laughing until weak.

Station Master—What are you laughing at?

Fourth Fellow—Say, they were supposed to be seeing me off!

An old man who was selling aluminum kitchen gadgets and other trinkets stopped the other day long enough to talk. He said he was not on the old age assistance list, he was not and never had been on relief and was having a hard time making a living and remarked: "If times get much harder I am going to preaching. I have done it before and am not too good to do it again."

It is hard to know what to do with new, strange things:

A country minister's daughter called on an elderly woman by special request, read to her a letter just received from her sailor son:

Visitor (as she returned the letter to the proud old woman)—What a nice letter. And the present he is sending you sounds very nice. But what will you do with a striped kimono?

Elderly Woman (in despair)—Well, may you ask Miss! I don't know I am sure. I suppose I can chain it up in the yard, or keep it in the barn. But what I'll feed it, goodness only knows!

Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT
Washington—I thought it could be told, but it can't—so on this story you'll have to bear with me while I omit a few names and admit nothing—and tell what I hope is a fascinating tale of an armchair Marco Polo who has left important pin-pricks on the face of the earth because he had a hobby.

In the files of the state department is a collection of maps which tells more of the activities of American marines in the equatorial Pacific—and hence forms a valuable basis for our claims to many islands there—than any other record extant. And it is there because Dr. Charles Haskins Townsend, former director of the famous Aquarium on the Battery in New York city, got interested in Galapagos tortoises.

Doctor Townsend, now living in retirement on Long Island, found that these shell-backed plodders of the centuries (many live 300 to 400 years) were becoming extinct. He wanted to search out ways of preserving the species.

Tracks Whalers
His study of the Galapagos tortoises led him to the whaling industry—for the whalers used these big shell-backs much. They took them aboard, killed them when the larder ran low, feasted for days.

The point is that Doctor Townsend became more interested in the whaling industry than in the Galapagos turtles. He discovered that the logs of those ships listed every point at which a whale had been taken. And there began his labor of love.

Months on end, he spent sticking pins into maps of the world, checking every point that an American whaler had taken its load, until he has listed 1,665 voyages, pricked off the death struggle of 53,877 whales, and turned out one of the most amazing maps on record—the Seven Seas' pattern of the American whaling industry from 1761 to 1920.

Uncle Sam Searches

That's Chapter No. 1. A few years ago, the state department was checking up on the United States' claims to a few tiny atolls in the Pacific.

There was a report that the New York Public Library has records which might be important. An employee was dispatched to New York to investigate. After hours of research, he found that what he needed was not available. He was about to leave when a library assistant recalled that somebody at the Aquarium was writing a book about the whaling industry that had to do with the Pacific.

The state department official checked up on that and discovered Doctor Townsend's hobby. He found that not anywhere in the history books is there such a complete record of discovery, exploitation and habitation of the unknown or unimportant islands of the world as in Doctor Townsend's minutely pin-jabbed maps of the far voyages of the whalers.

Discovery, exploitation and habitation are the three factors which contribute most to a nation's claims to lands which fly no flags.

Still Claiming Land

Do you see why the Doctor's hobby has become one of the important treasures in the state department files?

The idea that the United States is static as far as its land acquisitions are concerned can be dismissed right now. As recently as 1938, Presidential proclamation announced to the world that we were taking over hitherto unclaimed islands in the far Pacific. By the same method, some of these days, we may tell the world that we are planting the American flag permanently on a sizable hunk of the Antarctic.

If there should be any objection, it will fall to the state department to smother the objectors with documentary evidence substantiating our claim.

Out of a hobby like Doctor Townsend's may come one of our great midocean airline bases of tomorrow—or perhaps some valuable slice of the earth's surface that yesterday was no more important than an ice-capped peak in Antarctica.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

War Profiteering?
Brighton, England (AP)—Brighton Educational Committee accused the town's churches of "profiteering at the expense of evacuees" and rejected a schedule of rentals for hire of church property as additional schools. The committee's alternative was a decision to requisition any church property it required at rentals approved by its own valuer. The coastal holiday town received 13,000 London children at the outbreak of war, but only 9,000 remained. The others filtered back to the dingy streets of East End London.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Thrown For a Loss

McKeesport, Pa.—Gratitude put 13-year-old Clair Mullen back in the hospital.

He broke his left arm playing football last September. Treatments ended at McKeesport Hospital last week but nurses were so nice to the youth he returned to make a social call.

Running up the hospital steps, Clair fell—and broke the same arm again.

Delayed Stork

Coatesville, Pa.—A borrowed car broke down as William M. McConsey, Jr., was speeding his wife—an expectant mother—to a hospital at West Chester.

The couple caught a ride with a motorist who was heading for Coatesville, ten miles in the opposite direction.

On the outskirts of the town, the car caught fire. Undaunted, McConsey called a taxi. They arrived at the hospital just before the baby was born.

Robin's Regret

Davenport, Iowa—The police had to be called out to rescue a robin, trapped for 18 hours by a pair of string it was using to build a nest.

The string first became caught on the limb of a tree high above the ground. Then Mr. Robin got it tangled around his foot. Each time the bird tried to fly away he literally looped the loop until his foot was made fast against the limb.

80th Birthday of
Rev. I. P. Emerick

The following was written by Mrs. I. P. Emerick in honor of the 80th birthday of her husband, the Rev. Irving P. Emerick, April 14, 1940, Tilton, N. Y.

From Germany's Lower Palatinate, Came the Emericks to West Camp in 1708.

They left their homeland to settle there To escape persecution they could not bear.

They changed their home on the castled Rhine, To the banks of the Hudson, with its scenery fine.

Four hundred acres of land from the Indians they bought, And to make a comfortable home they sought.

With others who from the Palatinate did come, They built a church and a school as well as a home.

On the old church records their names are found, As officers and faithful members renowned.

For freedom and justice they always stood, And were foremost in promoting all that was good.

On Washington's body guard an Emerick was placed, And the dangers of war he bravely faced.

On the original homestead always have lived, Descendants of these Emericks and the land they have filled.

When one generation passed away, The next generation was there to stay.

The oldest son inherited the farm, And he did his best to carry on.

In 1706 William H. Emerick was born, His father died young, and he had the farm.

Brothers and sisters were left to his care, As the oldest son, 'twas his burden to bear.

Each morning to them the bible he read, And prayers for God's help and guidance were said.

These sisters and brothers, when they were grown, All married and lived in homes of their own.

Margaret became a Lutheran minister's wife, As missionaries in India they spent part of their life.

This William H. Emerick, Catherine Vrooman had wed, And to the old homestead to live he had led.

Nine children unto them were born, And all brought up on the old home farm.

The years passed away...The children were grown, And some from the old home nest had flown.

To be a minister William H. always meant, Now forty years old, to Theological Seminary he went.

At different places the gospel he preached, And everywhere many souls were reached.

To Athens he went, and Benjamin his son, Met Mary Jane Porter, and her love he won.

When only eighteen, Benjamin she married, And to the old homestead she was carried.

There Irving Porter, their first child, was born, And played around on the old home farm.

As William H. could now live on the farm, His brother Peter bought it and made it his home.

To a farm of their own Irving's parents now went, With his brothers and sisters there his young days were spent.

When eighteen years old to teach school he began, In the country of Greene, the school house did stand.

Twenty boys and one girl made up his school, He oft used the rod the children to rule.

Like his grandfather he desired a minister to be, So at Hartwick Seminary next him we see.

After three years at Hartwick had passed, For one year at Mt. Marlon he taught. This the last To Selma he then for theology he went.

For three years the time in hard study he spent, At Lenitigo is the next place we find him.

To the Reformed Church there the Lord had called him, Then, Alice Schutt of Kingston, he took for his wife.

For 53 years together they have spent their life, For 53 years he has answered the call. To tell the world Jesus Christ can save all.

Stuart, Va. (AP)—D. Crockett Smith, 82-year-old retired farmer, and Mrs. Sarah E. Aaron, also 82, were married here. It was the third marriage for the bride and the second for the groom.

For the Record
Wichita, Kas.—Homer B. Osborn, area census director, doesn't believe all that stuff about women covering up their age. A woman phoned his office:

"My husband gave my age wrong. He said I was 70. I'm not. I'm 83, and I still do my housework and quite a few chores outside."

The election will be conducted May 10. The results will not be announced until Moving-Up Day, May 24.

Education Night
Mrs. Millard Davis, president of the local association has announced that the program for Wednesday, May 1, will be devoted to a display of projects and work being carried on in the local school. Boys and girls will be on hand to show their parents "how it is done." Perhaps mother and dad will learn a little bit about science, art, literature or history. Plans will be discussed for the concert and dance on May 8 and also for an annual picnic to take place sometime in June. Mrs. Davis has appointed the following committee to take care of hospitalization applications: Mrs. Winfield Depuy, chairman; Edith Miller and Mrs. Max Brown. Applications may be secured from the committee and forwarded at once to the Associate Hospital Service of New York. Any member of the P-T-A. is eligible.

Yearbook Printed
The school yearbook, "Council Fires," is completed and has been sent to press, according to Sylvia Cohen, chief typist. This year's publication will contain more pictures and write-ups than that of the two previous years. In addition, it will feature Kerhonkson's largest graduating class. As announced previously, the theme will be "Dutch Colonial" and the book will contain a brief history of the Dutch influence in the Rondout Valley.

School to Close
School will be closed Friday, April 26, in order that the members of the faculty may attend the annual spring conference in the Ellenville High school, according to Lester J. Roca, district superintendent.

Because of their tenderness, special care is needed in growing raspberries and other bramble fruits. Cornell Bulletin E-224 has helpful information, and single copies are free to residents of the state who write to the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

The Y. M. C. A. financial drive, marking the 75th anniversary of the founding of the "Y" in Kingston, drew close to the $8,000 mark when the campaign workers at the dinner meeting last evening at the "Y" reported a total of 279 subscribers pledging contributions amounting to $3,409.60, which brings the total for the two days to $7,768.40.

The nearly $8,000 pledged was contained in 626 subscriptions or pledges that the workers have so far received. The workers will gather again on Friday evening at the "Y" for the last report meeting of the week, and Monday evening it is planned to close the campaign.

"Admiral" Bert C. Van Ingen's good ship the Half Moon still leads the ships of the other three divisions in the drive, the workers on the ship having obtained the largest number of pledges of any of the four divisions in the race. As a result for the second time this week the American flag was placed at the table of Half Moon workers.

The reports of the divisions made last night follows:

Pledges Amount
Howard St. John... 23 $128.50
B. C. Van Ingen... 105 497.00
L. H. Doty... 19 83.50
Woman's Division... 85 333.60
Initial gifts... 46 2,355.00
Out of town... 1 10.00

Previously reported .347 4,358.80
626 $7,768.40
The number on the hundred dollars honor roll continued to grow as more campaign workers' names were added who had obtained pledges of $100 or more.

The names on the honor roll are Miss Mary Treadwell, Ernest LeFever, Dewitt Wells, George Matthews, C. S. Treadwell, Clarence Dunn, A. B. Shufeldt, C. E. Wonderly, Howard St. John, W. W. Brady, Edward DeWitt, A. C. Quimby and Harold Davis.

The guests of the evening were the basketball squad of St. Mary's Church who won the championship of the Church Basketball League at the "Y" the past winter. The players were introduced by Physical Director Weldon J. Mccluskey of the "Y." They were Tommy Madden, Jimmy Albany, Charley Coughlin, Henry Kram, Andy Murphy and George Beichert, player and manager of the team.

The champions were presented with small gold basketballs for their excellent record in winning the championship of the church league.
Fred L. Van Deusen, well known local magician, entertained with several feats of magic, including a brand new trick that was both astonishing and astounding.
The speaker of the evening was the Rev. John A. Wright, pastor of the Wurts Street Baptist Church who took as his theme the Y. M. C. A. as the discoverer of values in personality, and called attention to the excellent record of the "Y" had played in the history of Kingston, and especially its work among the youth of the city. For 75 years the history of the "Y" had been closely intertwined with the history of Kingston.

Those in charge of the "Y" campaign last evening expressed themselves as pleased with the results so far obtained. They said that the reports made last evening were within $130 that the campaign managers had expected to receive at the second report meeting.

There is every indication that the campaign will reach tops as the public of Kingston is deeply interested in the "Y" and its work and the need of a city to have a wideawake, active association such as the city now boasts.

Trophy on Display
The City Basketball League championship trophy won by the Elks is on display in the window of the Harry B. Walker Broadway Pharmacy, 478 Broadway.

Audience Enjoys Operetta Performance

An operetta which began as a project executed "just for fun" by the combined choirs of the Clinton Avenue and the Saugerties Methodist Churches, resulted in a performance enjoyed equally as well by the goodly sized audience which attended it Wednesday evening in Epworth Hall.

The direction was in charge of Mrs. Harold Dederick, organist and choir director of the Saugerties Church, and Mrs. Raymond H. Rignall, director of the Clinton Avenue choir. Mrs. Arthur Ellison, organist of the local church, was the accompanist.

The production was a big but laudable undertaking for a group of amateurs but it was received in the spirit in which it was given, and gave both actors and audience an evening of Gilbert and Sullivan, who are always appealing no matter how often heard.

The leads were all taken by local singers and were well cast, both as to acting and vocal requirements of the parts. Solos were sung by Vernon S. Miller, Donald Weeks, Robert VanKleeck, Walter Hahn, Milton Schiele, Helen Senior, Irma Tigar and Edwina Schultz.

Following the production the local members of the cast were hosts at an informal social hour to the members of the Saugerties choir.

Honored with Shower

New Paltz, April 25—Mrs. George Langwick of New Paltz was honored with a shower given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. J. Parker Hull, of Clintondale. Mrs. Langwick was the former Jean Marlen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Marlen of New Paltz. Gifts were presented to the guest of honor in a carriage decorated in blue and pink crepe paper. Among those attending were: Mrs. James Hull, Mrs. Louis Marlen, Mrs. Benny Langwick, Betty Langwick, Mrs. Crosby Wilkin, Mrs. Harris, Helen Gray, Mrs. Kermit Schoonover, Mrs. Ralph Van Sicken, Mrs. Jerome Hurd, Mrs. Leander Minard, Mrs. E. B. Minard, Mrs. William Minard, Mrs. Russell Minard, Mrs. Ella Covert, Mrs. Edward Jenkins, Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. Clarence Thorn, Mrs. Lillian Eltinge, Mrs. Jenny Minard, Mrs. Harold Minard, Mrs. Lulu Sutton, Mrs. Philip Walker, Mrs. Charles Squire, Mrs. Jay Heaton, Mrs. Ella Ostrander, Mrs. Harry Sutton and Mrs. Clayton Jenkins. Refreshments were served by Mrs. James Hull, Mrs. Ralph Van Sicken, Joan Hull and Janet Van Sicken.

Card Party Successful

Last evening the members of the Business Girls' Club of the Y. W. C. A. held a supper and bridge party at the association building which was successful socially and financially. More than 20 tables were in play during the evening. Proceeds of the affair will be used for the club's Christmas service work. Arrangements were in charge of Miss Ruth Vandenberg and Miss Miriam Halloran, finance committee chairmen and Miss Maude Curry and Miss Dorothy DuMont, social service chairmen. Next week reports will be made by Miss Alma Tyler on the Y. W. C. A. convention in Atlantic City which she attended several weeks ago and by Miss Adiska Conno and Miss Dorothy Davis, who will attend a planning conference in Gloversville this week-end.

New Booklet Shows How To Play Bang-Up Tennis

Here are Pointers on Serving

Only a short while ago a flop on the tennis court, but this Spring she surprises the crowd with her fast serve, her clever game!

It's simple to play good tennis when you practice with the right instructions. Is yours a weak serve, often going astray? A good service is 70 per cent of the game to the server, so follow these pointers.

To have a fast, controlled serve, you must time it accurately—and important in timing is the way you toss the ball.

As you start your toss, let your left hand travel along the line of the base line. The ball should go about 18 inches higher than the point at which you hit it and at the top of the throw it should curve as if coming down near your left foot.

Now, knowing where the ball will fall, it is easy to control your serve. To put speed and force into your stroke, swing your racket back slowly, then forward as fast as you can.

For other fine points of tennis, see our new 32-page booklet by George Agutter, noted tennis teacher. Explains the serve, forehand, backhand, lob, cut strokes and volley. Gives pointers on practicing, footwork, tactics that outwit your opponent. A guide both for beginners and more experienced players.

Send 10c in coin for your copy of DEVELOP CORRECT TENNIS FORM to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth avenue, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

WHAT ARE OBLIGATIONS OF BOY WHO FINDS GIRL IS "TERRIBLE" DANCER?

She Invites Him to Her Boarding School and His Mother Thinks He Should Return the Invitation

The one thing a young girl who expects to go to dances must do is learn to dance well. When a boy spends one painful evening with a girl who turns out to be a bad dancer, I cannot honestly agree with his mother that he should be expected to suffer throughout a second evening. I do not mean by this that I think his mother is wrong in expecting him to show proper respect for his obligations whether he finds them pleasant or not. But when she asks me: "What can be done with my young son who refuses to be polite to a girl because she turned out to be a bad dancer?" sympathy for him is hard to withhold. Her letter continues:

"My son accepted her invitation to a school dance, even though he didn't know her very well, because in the only conversation they had she talked about how she loved dancing and he thought she was a good dancer. She is a boarding student at a girls' school in this town where we live. He told me the day after the dance that she was a terrible dancer, not a single boy cut in, and he had a miserable evening. The girls at this school are not allowed to go with boys to the theatre or movies so that leaves only dancing, and like it or not, I think he should invite her to a dance at his school."

In addition to what I have already said, I think that the boy probably feels that having spent one evening unhappily dragging her around the floor paid his obligation—at least so far as dancing goes! My suggestion is that he invite her, as well as other young people, to come to a small party at your house. She would certainly be able to get permission from the school for that.

Nation's Corn King Relies On Hybrid Corn to Capture The Crown Again This Year

By NATHAN OATIS
AP Feature Service

Lafontaine, Ind.—Chester E. Troyer, world's corn king, is going to try to do what no farmer ever has done—win the crown a fifth time.

A short, sharp-faced man in blue overalls, in his yellow farmhouse on the Mississinewa river near here talked about plans for plowing.

"I'm interested in winning one or two more championships," he said, "and I'll probably follow along the same lines as before."

That means the triple-threat combination that won him his latest title at the international hay-and-grain show in Chicago in December—good land, old-fashioned farming methods and a twentieth-century product.

The land is rich, chocolate-brown river bottom, where Troyer and his father before him have grown corn since 1894 and where the Miami Indians grew it for centuries before then.

The methods are those that in

Corn King & King Corn
Their Partner: The River

30 years of farming Troyer has found best for raising prize-winning ears—mainly hand work.

The product is one which Troyer pioneered in developing—hybrid seed corn.

"Good Field Ready"

The man who would be corn king must show the best-looking 10 ears of seed corn at the international exhibition. Now 53, Troyer has entered 13 of the 21 shows and won in four—in 1920, 1927, 1933, and 1939. Only Peter J. Lux of Shelbyville, Ind., also has won four times.

"I've got a good field ready," the corn king went on, "and I've picked out my best seed corn to plant."

The field is 26 acres along the river where Troyer twice has grown the world's best corn. Last year it was in sweet clover. Almost every other spring, the river spreads on a layer of top-soil from upstream.

Early Diagnosis Campaign Here

There is always one way which is the shortest and surest. The one way to control—eventually eradicate—tuberculosis throughout this country in the shortest time is to make a deliberate search for the disease with the X-ray among apparently healthy persons. The Early Diagnosis Campaign is being held this month by the Ulster County Tuberculosis Association to bring out clearly the sureness and economy of this way.

If we continue to do little about the prevention and cure of tuberculosis until we are forced to treatment by the appearance of undeniable symptoms, we, as individuals and as a community, may as well admit that we are using the wrong tactics to control the disease.

Tuberculosis is one of the few diseases that seldom show any symptoms until the body is losing its fight with the germs. When symptoms do appear, in many cases health is irretrievable and the germs may have spread to many other persons.

Our defense against this insidious characteristic of tuberculosis is to discover its presence in the body before symptoms appear. The search can be quick and infallible.

The tuberculin test, a painless skin test, followed by a chest X-ray for the positive reactors, will detect the disease. The perfect procedure would be to test everyone in the country.

Such a program is impractical obviously, but the X-raying of various large groups already started can gain speed and be expanded to include an increasing number of persons.

We are forced to economy. The tuberculin test costs very little, but as yet the X-ray does cost something. The problem of group X-raying can be narrowed to the groups in which the disease is most prevalent.

Tuberculosis is primarily a disease of adults, particularly young adults. Hence groups composed mostly of persons of the ages between 15 to 45 are the logical groups to X-ray first.

Students in high schools, colleges and universities offer compact groups which would readily be convinced of the wisdom of tuberculosis testing.

The testing of any one office staff in this city would have a strong influence on other such business groups to take the same precaution.

Industrial groups, labor organizations, in fact, any group assembled for work, study or recreation are the needed nuclei around which to build programs for tuberculosis testing.

Of course, testing is imperative for anyone who has known contact with a person who has active tuberculosis. This applies stringently to the members of the family and those who have had relatively close association with the tuberculous person.

As in all progress, the beginning is made by an individual. We, as individuals, know now what we can do to control tuberculosis. We can be tested and examined for the disease and advocate others doing the same.

If tuberculosis is to be eradicated from this country in the next two decades—and authorities tell us it can be done—we must begin a well-directed search for it among apparently healthy people.

Bureau to Open Office Shortly In the City Hall

Allan L. Hanstein, president of the recently organized Kingston Industrial Bureau, announced today that the bureau would open an office in the city hall, which would be ready about the first of May.

Mr. Hanstein said that there was a room available on the first floor of the city hall, which Mayor

Heiselman had informed the bureau could be used by the association to carry on its work.

Not only is an office needed where the bureau can function efficiently, but by accepting the offer of the city administration the bureau is able to save the cost and expense of engaging office space elsewhere.

The Weather-meter, used in the Bureau of Standards in Washington to test asphalt shingles, short-circuits the calendar. It duplicates sunlight, rain, cold and heat so rapidly that it can produce ten years' weathering in a year—ten times faster than time.

JACOBS WITH GALENTO, JUST BEFORE HE DIED

Heart Attack Proves Fatal To Manager Joe Jacobs

New York, April 25 (AP)—The fight mob along Broadway said "so long" to Joe Jacobs today. Little "Yussel the Muscle," the colorful—almost legendary—character who came up out of New York's tough "Hell's Kitchen" to manage one world heavyweight champion and six other titleholders in assorted lighter divisions, died last night of a heart attack. He passed away in a doctor's office, just 13 days short of his 44th birthday and just a few minutes after returning from supervising another of his "egg" stunts by which he gained for his fighters the publicity so important to the science of fisticuffing.

This was a newsreel series in which Tony Galento, the pudgy Orange (N. J.) heavyweight whom Joe picked up off the fistic scrap heap a couple of years ago, answered Max Baer's allegations of "bum." Galento and Baer are scheduled to fight in Jersey City May 28, the winner to meet Joe Louis for the heavyweight title some time this summer.

Most Colorful

Everyone agreed the fight game had lost a man whose antics and accomplishments probably never would be equalled. As promoter Mike Jacobs (no relation, but a close friend) put it, "he was the most colorful manager who ever lived; boxing will miss him." It was "Yussel" who bounced up on the apron of the ring in Yankee Stadium that night of June 14, 1930, and screamed "foul" so loud that his Max Schmeling won the world heavyweight championship while groveling on the canvas from a low blow struck by Jack Sharkey.

It was Joe, who, when Sharkey won the title by a decision over the German heavyweight two years later, howled "we wuz robbed," now an immortal part of fisticuffing's phraseology. There were other laugh-provoking terms he coined and which are part of the fight game's every-day language. For instance, there was "I should have stood in bed," which he is supposed to have said after a friend woke him in the middle of his "night"—about 2 p. m.—to see a ball game one chilly day.

'Yussel' Dies

Wearing a sporty cap and smoking his inevitable cigar, this was the Joe Jacobs the fighting world knew as an almost legendary figure for many years. Fight fans dubbed him "Yussel." He died of a heart attack in New York two hours after a visit with his fighter, Tony Galento.

Humble Beginning

Son of a poor tailor, Joe was brought up in one of the toughest sections of New York—along Tenth avenue—in the heart of an Irish neighborhood. Smaller than the rest, he realized immediately that, since he was going to be connected with fights, anyway, he had better pick his "spot." So he turned to managing, first piloting Willie and Dave Astey, neighbors of his. During the war, while soldiering at a camp in Georgia, he promoted doughboy fights. Afterward, in partnership with Billy McCarney, he managed such well-known battlers as Benny Valga, featherweight champions Andre Routis and Johnny Dundee and light-heavyweight champion Mike McGuire.

Since hooking up with Schmeling, when the German first came to this country, Joe's interests were almost solely with heavyweights—"because," he explained, "that's where the most cocoanuts are." And, as one of Broadway's most liberal spenders—every night club knew him—he, naturally, had to be supplied liberally with "the cocoanuts."

Joe's religion did not "sit well" with the powers that be in Germany and gradually Schmeling was prevailed upon to have Max Machon, his German trainer, handle his affairs. Yet, the Moxie respected Joe's knowledge and took his advice to the end.

Helped Galento Up

After Schmeling, Jacobs picked up Galento, who had been given up as through by virtually every expert in the fight game. He piloted him so shrewdly and successfully—on the theory that the beer-drinking, rough and tumble "townton" was a "throwback" to John L. Sullivan—that Galento eventually received a shot at heavyweight champion Louis.

Galento, summoned to the doctors' office where Joe died, broke down and, weeping, sobbed "come on, Joey, come back; wake up." Surviving Joe are two brothers, Caswell, a detective on the Broadway squad, and Ben, a real estate operator, and two sisters, Mrs. May Grieb and Miss Rose Jacobs.

Athletic Meeting

The first annual meeting of the Catholic Church Athletic Association will be held in St. Mary's hall this evening at 7:30. Representatives from 11 parishes in Kingston and vicinity will attend this meeting to elect officers for the ensuing year and complete plans for the reorganization of the association.

Softball Governors Give Plan for Coming Season

The Board of Governors of Kingston's three major softball leagues, representing nearly 1,000 softball players in the city, lost no time last night in developing an organization which will integrate the activities of each of the leagues and provide a mediation board of neutral men who will settle all league disputes.

The non-duplication rule, already made effective in the City League, was strongly endorsed by the board. It was pointed out that there would be many advantages to each of the leagues as a result of this ruling. To enforce this ruling the board provided representatives of each of the leagues with registration cards to be filled out by each player. These cards will be filed in the Department of Recreation office and checked against all team rosters.

No Shifting

In order to prevent haphazard shifting of players from one league to another during the season, it was ruled that no player could be taken on by a team in another league until the first half of play in the league with which he originally signed had been completed. This ruling came as the result of experience with the non-duplication rule in basketball last winter.

After discussing many of the problems regarding the use of softball diamonds, the board agreed upon the diamonds to be used by each of the leagues during the coming season. There may be some changes in diamond assignments when plans for new fields, which are being developed, become effective.

Field Assignments

The Federation of Men's Clubs League will use Lower Hasbrouck and the Armory diamond on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, of each week.

The Catholic Church League will use Block, Loughran, Armory and the upper and lower diamonds at Hasbrouck on Fridays only.

The City League will use Block, Loughran, upper Hasbrouck and either Barnum or a second diamond to be developed at the Armory.

Postponed Games

Another new feature will be the assignment of diamonds and dates for postponed games in all three leagues by the Department of Recreation. The board felt that this would tend to make better diamonds available for these games, and at the same time tend to prevent continued delays in getting such games played off.

The ninth of May was set as the last day when all team rosters must be set up and turned in at the Recreation Department office so that all three leagues could get under way the week of May 13. The possibility of several joint undertakings in which all three leagues could cooperate were discussed and held over for further consideration.

Jones Softies Will Practice Sunday

Jones Dairy softball squad is scheduled to hold its first practice session Sunday at 1 p. m. in Barnum Park, it was announced today by Manager Gil Sampson.

Looking forward to another banner year, Sampson will have his championship team intact. Last season it won both halves of the open division league for a clean sweep of local softball.

Manager Sampson's team will lineup with Chappie Cooper, Herb Van Deusen, Harry Geisler and Jim Frelich in the infield; in the outer gardens, Jess Shultis, Jack Schatzel, Ken Saunders, Randy Kelder and Frank Roe; battery, Ben Toffel and Coke Costello pitchers, and Babe Larkin and Don Plough catchers.

Such outstanding newcomers as Bob Belfe, Jimmy Secreto, Homer Herrick, Harry Mickle and Roger Saunders will make the regulars hustle to keep their positions.

including Communist and Fascist factions, and even would intern members of Parliament if "desirable."

More Canadians, augmenting about 20,000 men in previous contingents, and the first military units from Newfoundland was disclosed to have arrived in Britain.

Germany sent her warplanes ranging the length of east central Norway and up the west coast to Namsos. A Norwegian troop train carrying 165 soldiers was bombed near Trondheim, apparently with grave damage. Other points along the Trondheim-Oslo railway also were attacked, while indications in eastern Norway pointed toward an allied offensive there soon.

Positions Not Endangered

The allies asserted that their six-mile retreat had not endangered their general position and that they had good fortifications for the new line.

The Trondheim fighting apparently meant that major warfare is to be in that section, with the allies hoping to gain a foothold there for effective thrusts southward into the more populous region north of Oslo where German troops are extending occupation lines.

King Haakon from secret headquarters proclaimed that "there is no basis for negotiation" with Germany so long as Nazi troops are on Norwegian soil. He also denied recognition to the administrative council set up in Oslo after the invasion.

German planes carried out another raid during the night on Britain's Scapa Flow naval base, but the British declared the raiders had been driven off without damage.

The British government turned its attention to "fifth column" activities within the nation and there was talk that the communist party might be suppressed as it has been in France.

Certain members of parliament prepared to ask in the House of Commons what steps also have been taken to control the Fascists, who, like the Communists, have been carrying on a campaign to end the war.

Anti-Communist sentiment created a paradoxical situation since Britain is seeking a trade agreement with Soviet Russia and has asked Moscow for concrete proposals for a trade treaty in line with the allied blockade of Germany.

The French high command said there was "nothing to report" on the western front which has remained stalemated while the real fighting occurs in Scandinavia.

vestigated the ring almost since the day it began to do business.

"We didn't arrest them earlier," Dunigan said, "because we wanted to bring in all members of the combine. Thibadeau and Horowitz, equipped with long range lenses, have taken about 200 actual photographs of the gang in action."

Dunigan showed pictures his agents had taken of 82 cars and trucks. 51 of which treasury agents have seized, entering liquor "drops" or being loaded or unloaded.

"They operated with the regularity of train schedules," Dunigan added. "Regardless of weather or crowded highways the trucks pulled up never more than five minutes behind their regular schedules."

Dunigan said the ring controlled the entire New Jersey production of illicit alcohol—400,000 gallons in ten months—and controlled its distribution throughout the five states. New York state was divided into 11 "districts." An additional 29 were located in other states.

The combine, Dunigan said, sold alcohol at $5 a gallon, thus underselling by almost $6 a gallon law-abiding dealers.

House Overrides
Roosevelt's Veto

Washington, April 25 (P)—The House voted today to override President Roosevelt's veto of a bill to grant an estimated $7,000,000 to some 15,000 officers and men who were held in Philippine Island service after the Spanish American War had ended.

The roll call vote on overriding the veto was announced by Acting Speaker Rayburn as 274 for and 82 against.

A two thirds majority of those voting was required to pass the measure over the President's objections.

In disapproving the measure, similar to two others he previously vetoed, the President said it would constitute an inadvisable "gratuity" since those affected already had received just compensation.

Mooney Car Found
By Troy Police

The Pontiac car owned by Miss Mary Mooney which was taken from the yard of State Trooper Arthur Reilly some time between 1 o'clock and 7 o'clock Wednesday morning has been recovered by the Troy police at Troy. The car, owned by Officer Reilly's sister-in-law, is believed to have been taken by Henry J. Whalen, who escaped some time about midnight from the Napanoch Institution farm colony.

Kingston police observed a car being operated in a peculiar manner north toward the city line on Albany avenue and later the car of Lawrence Abrams of Kerhonkson was found abandoned on Elmendorf street. It is believed Whalen took the car at Kerhonkson and drove it to Kingston where it was abandoned and later the Mooney car was taken. Whalen's mother resides at Troy and police believe the young man made his way there. The Mooney car was found abandoned in Troy and taken to the Alva Brothers garage at 15th and Congress streets and the owner notified. Whalen was not apprehended. The car was reported in running condition but the keys were missing.
